Beware, Big Bill
The Parsee Room
Franc[illegible] Best Friend
Must We Lose the Ether?

"Big Bill" Haywood, in Russia, is in a dangerous place. The big one is now with Lenin, in his "inner council." So he thinks. He is planning to help along the "world revolution." As a small incident, he will come back here to "help the people rise."

It's an old story, this "world revolution" business. Undeveloped minds plan it, as each little boy plans to run away and be a pirate. Sometimes they run away, for a little while, but they do not become successful pirates.

Big Mr. Haywood is with minds UNLIKE his own. Inspired by a clear white fluid made in Russia, he will say or do something, then Russia will proceed with him.

Nothing is more dangerous than being out of step in such a rush as Lenin's. Mr. Haywood is out of step over there, and Russia is not easy-going America.

Over there they are excited, many hungry, all angry; they act quickly and there is no habeas corpus for big or little Bills.

History mixes up laces and races. Lloyd George, for England, Briand, for France, met to discuss making Germany pay what she has not got.

The meeting was held "in the gold and brick room of the residence of Sir Phillip Sassoon." Sassoon is a Parsee, one of those that the Arabs drove out of Persia 1,400 years ago. They lived among the Hindus, sticking to their corrupted idea of Zoroaster's religion, and began getting rich quickly after the British took India and business began to boom in Bombay.

A long journey from the lofty thought of Zoroaster, hideously corrupted by the thick-lipped Parsees, to the European black and gold room of the parasite fattening on India under British rule and going to England to spend the money. Wells ought to write about that.

Mr. James tells the New York Times "the French public has come to believe that President Harding and the Republican Administration are no friends of the Treaty of Versailles."

The French public is a mind reader. The United States government believes that the Treaty of Versailles was a perfectly natural, but perfectly childish, exhibition of post-war hatred, and not at all a basis on which to start world-wide reconstruction. This government knows that Germany can easily be driven into a condition of no government, or of government such as Russia has.

France will not get a cent of her thirty-billion-franc claim from Russia. And if she scorns President Harding's advice she is apt not get a cent from Germany, and to have Germany and Russia united under Bolshevism pressing on her borders. France could not stand that.

The French press attacks President Harding savagely, but should not do it. Mr. Harding wants the war settled in such fashion as to let it stay settled. He wants Germany to make fair payment to France. And France, if wise, will not force Germany to repeat Russia's total repudiation. If Germany offers, as is suggested, fifty thousand millions of gold marks, twelve times what Bismarck took from France after 1870, France will do well to accept, especially if real German work in the devastated regions is added to the cash offer.

Is there any private individual that would not rather have twelve thousand million marks in real gold than another war?

Einstein, lecturing solemnly on the fact that you cannot know much about anything, seems inclined to throw overboard the "imponderable ether" which has been such a comfort to scientists.

It is nothing but an hypothesis, of course, but useful, and to ordinary scientists it proves its existence about as clearly as does electricity.

No one sees electricity, or knows what it is, but we believe in it. Matter attracts matter, the earth pulls the moon and holds her tight, as she circles around, as in an old-fashioned waltz, with the partner held at arm's length.

There MUST BE something between us and the moon, to let gravity work. Newton felt it, everybody admits it. If Einstein kills off the convenient ether hypothesis, then gravity becomes a childish miracle, matter being held with nothing to hold it, and Newton will turn in his grave.

For an exposition of Einstein's thought, simple in the extreme, read a little book called, "From Newton to Einstein." It is rather like saying, "Pike's Peak to Bunker Hill," but, nevertheless, it is a good book. You do not need to be told that the world will still be discussing and learning from Newton, greatest of mathematical geniuses, except possibly Archimedes, in all time, long after Einstein is forgotten. He is one of the little by-products of science, but interesting and worth while. Without Einstein, at least fifty millions of people would hardly know that such a creature as Newton ever lived. The idiotic Baconian theory has made many read Shakespeare.

MELROSE WOMAN CALLED IN LOUD CASE

EASTERN TRUSTEES ASSAIL VAHEY

MATRON TO GO BEFORE TUFTS

Young Wife Persistently Mentioned in Preston Inquiry Is to Be Questioned

A young Melrose matron who has been persistently mentioned in the Wakefield murder case was expected at the East Cambridge courthouse today for questioning by District Attorney Nathan A. Tufts.

Much significance was attached to this move, as the Somers had not previously conferred with Tufts.

It was expected that she would be grilled as to her acquaintance with Clarence W. Loud, and her movements the night Patrolman James A. Preston was murdered.

Attaches of Mr. Tufts' office would not say what new developments had finally decided him to "invite" her to his office for interrogation.

Police were today investigating stories which would show that Clarence W. Loud had been engaged in the sale of "bootleg" whiskey.

It was rumored a prominent suburban hotel proprietor was due to be questioned in this connection.

Talks reaching the authorities are to the effect that Castle Rock, in the vicinity of the murder, was a rendezvous for the "bootleggers," and the possibility that Loud's alleged associates in the business may have been on hand and helped him when the State charges he killed Preston is being investigated.

Another development today was the alleged discovery of persons who saw

BIG BICYCLE RUN ON MAY 15

If You Own a Wheel Here's an Opportunity to Join in Big Event

The Boston American will conduct a big social bicycle run on Sunday afternoon, May 15, for the benefit of its readers. Do you own a bicycle? If so you'd better plan to become a participant in this great event. To promote health and pleasure is the purpose of the run.

The bicycle run conducted under the auspices of this newspaper last September was such a big success that it was decided to hold another and make it an even bigger success. The outing conducted by the Boston American last fall opened the eyes of thousands of spectators who thought the bicycle was a thing of the past.

Nearly 5,000 persons rode bicycles in that run and experts familiar with the facts said it was the biggest event of its kind ever conducted in the United States. There were at least 10,000 people gathered together at the rendezvous near Chestnut Hill reservoir.

The bicycle editor hopes twice as many riders will take part in next month's run and that thousands more will congregate at the destination. The rendezvous has not yet been decided upon but in all events it will be more than six or eight miles

IRISH FATHER OF 10 EXECUTED

SINN FEIN PRISONER HANGED

Thomas Traynor Put to Death in Mount Joy Prison as Family Knels in Prayer Outside

Dublin, April 25.—While his wife and ten children knelt outside of the jail walls sobbing and praying, Thomas Traynor, a Sinn Feiner, was hanged at Mount Joy prison today.

As the execution bell rang in the prison yard the great crowd which had gathered outside fell upon its knees and cries of lamentations filled the air. Traynor was found guilty by court martial of murdering Cadet Parnell of the British military police on March 14.

Ireland again passed through a bloody week-end. A constable was killed and several others were wounded in a fight between policemen and republicans near Maam in County Galway.

A police inspector was killed and two policemen were wounded when a military lorry fired by mistake upon a police motor near Gormanstown.

Fighting lasted for nearly twenty-two hours at North Louth and South Armagh. A Sinn Feiner, who had been captured, was shot through the jaw while trying to escape.

Four Dead in Week-End Clashes

London, April 25.—Four dead, one dying and eleven wounded is the week-end toll in the North, West and Southern distri^s of Ireland.

A fight last night over arms hours beginning at 4:15 A. M. Sunday morning followed the ambushing of police party that was returning to arrest Pat O'Malle, Sinn Fein member of parliament from the Connemara district of Galway.

Two cadets were shot at Castle Junction Saturday night, in the central part of Belfast. One is dead and the other dying. The shooting of police revolvers in pursuit of the attacking party caused wounds to three passersby.

Three hours later, at midnight, armed men who were stated to have worn police uniforms, raided the house of a Nationalist. Two men were shot dead by the raiders.

Bombs were thrown in Limerick. Three soldiers and two civilians were wounded. Seven out of the twenty attackers were arrested.

BAY STATE TO FIGHT STRIKE

Arranges for Breakers to Run All Cars If Men Walk Out on May 1

Attorney James H. Vahey general counsel for the 2,500 union carmen of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company, was bitterly assailed today in a brief sttement issued by the trustees of the road.

The statement was in effect a refusal to arbitrate differences with the men over the impending wage out, which threatens to bring on a strike May 1.

"The only kind of arbitration Mr. Vahey wants is that covering a long period of time, guaranteeing him enormous fees and taking thousands of dollars from the pockets of car riders in high fares" said the trustees.

"Our aim is to reduce fares and induce the public to ride, thus giving more men employment."

PLANS FOR OPERATING CARS.

Coupled with this statement from the trustees came a sharp challenge from the public relations bureau of the road, declaring the company was ready to operate every car on the system with non-union labor if the strike threat was made good.

"Managers all over the line have received hundreds of applications for work from former employes," said Director Fred A. Cummings of the public relations bureau.

It was stated that already enough crews have been signed to assure the operation of all cars the company may wish to operate in case of strike. It was hinted, however, that if the men did go out, afew long interurban runs might be suspended, owing to the difficulty of protecting the non-union crews.

The non-union strike-breakers who will be employed will be housed in the company's carbarns. These barns have been equipped with cots and facilities for feeding the crews.

Representatives of concerns specializing in strike-breaking were eng-

FEAR O'DALY GOT OVER $40,000

Police Believe Cashier Underestimated Sum He Stole From City of Boston

The possibility that the shortage in the accounts of City Cashier Thomas J. O'Daly may amount to more than the $40,000 originally named was put forward by the police today.

They declared that a man caught as O'Daly was never names the maximum amount of his peculations, and believe that the completion of the audit will show a much larger sum is missing.

This theory is opposed to that held by City Auditor J. Alfred Mitchell, who said that he did not believe O'Daly's total shortage would exceed $40,000.

Auditor Mitchell denied today that O'Daly had taken the money in a lump sum, as he originally stated. Mitchell said the audit thus far made shows that up to November, 1918,

New York, April 25.—Forgiveness and the parental blessing were bestowed on pretty Kate Stevens, eighteen-year-old heiress to the estimated $15,000,000 estate of her father, Calvin Amory Stevens, the Broad street recluse, and Richard Fagan, nineteen-year-old Dartmouth student, with whom she eloped.

Both are going back to school, the young man for three years more.

The winsome bride and her young husband, whom she married ten days ago, arrived from Boston to "face the music."

But instead of the parental wrath they had secretly feared, they were promptly forgiven at a little reunion at the Biltmore Hotel.

William B. Fagan, Stock Exchange broker, the bridegroom's father, and Mrs. Jessie L. Stevens, widow of the eccentric millionaire, met the elopers, by arrangement, in the reception room of the hotel yesterday afternoon.

The elder Fagan had never seen his daughter-in-law until Dick formally introduced them with a cheery:

"Well, Dad, here's my bride—Kate."

The broker's features broke into a

REPORT THE GERMAN OFFER EXCEEDS 200,000,000,000 MARKS

FINAL INDEMNITY AGREEMENT BELIEVED NEAR

By International News Service.

Events appeared today to be moving swiftly toward a final settlement of the world-import ant German indemnity question.

Unofficial reports from Berlin that Germany is offering the allies from 200,000,000,000 to 225,000,000,000 gold marks in principle, interest payments and in goods in payment of her war indemnity during the next forty-two years loomed today the possibility that the allied armies will advance from the Rhine next Sunday and occupy the Ruhr district.

In the absence of any official announcement, contradictory reports were current concerning the proposals contained in the note which Berlin is sending to President Harding. In fact, one German newspaper stated, but without confirmation, that two notes and a third explanatory note were being transmitted to Washington.

Opinion was expressed in French official circles that the German proposals would prove unacceptable. France is prepared for any eventuality. If Germany's final offer is rejected, Marshal Foch will be fully prepared for swift military action at the end of the week. He will throw a ring of allied troops around a strip of German territory containing the richest coal mines and industrial belt of the country—a district that embraces a population of 4,000,000 souls.

The next definite development will be the publication of the German communication to President Harding and the attitude which Great Britain and France adopt toward the indemnity proposals contained therein.

Effect of Proposals on Harding Watched

By International News Service.

Hythe, England, April 25.—The conference of Premier Lloyd George and Premier Briand broke up today without either of the allied statesmen learning the contents of Germany's new indemnity proposals.

A brief meeting was held during the morning, at which procedure was discussed for the meeting of the latter-allied supreme council next Saturday.

It is possible that the United States will be represented informally at the meeting of the Supreme Council next Saturday, although complications stand in the way of extending an invitation to Washington to participate by reason of the fact that the United States has not accepted the Treaty of Versailles. The eyes of the interested powers are turned anxiously upon Washington to see how President Harding accepts the latest German proposal. The view is taken that, if President Harding decides to transmit the proposals to the allies the United States may be put in the position of supporting the German suggestions as equitable.

On the other hand, if President Harding and his advisers take the attitude that the German proposals do not form the basis for future negotiations on indemnity, it is unlikely that they will be transmitted from Washington to London and Paris

WORLD PEACE TASK EASIER

Hapgood Sees Europe Nearing Point Where She Can Face Bitter Truths

By NORMAN HAPGOOD.

Staff Correspondent Boston American.

Norman Hapgood.

Washington, April 25.—The present effort to divert the European pressure, of trouble into a better course the administration has increasing advantage over its predecessor. Mr. Wilson got nothing like the settlement he desired for the simple reason that the conquering powers were bound by secret treaties and alien were still engaged with the idea that they could get profit out of extreme terms.

Now everything is changed. Disillusion is creeping over the people of Europe. They are not even yet quite ready to face the dark truth that there is no salvation for them in conquest, in oppression, in revenge, but they are approaching the point where they can be brought to face that truth.

DISEASE OF VICTORY.

The Germans have a word siegeskrankheit. It means the disease resulting from victory. It is a good word, for it names a deep truth. The British took a violent plunge into this disease in December, 1918. In the khaki election of evil fame Lloyd George came back into enormous power on the issue of "hang-the-Kaiser and make Germany pay the entire cost of the war."

It was a fake, as Lloyd George well knew. Every other thinking person knew it, too. But disease come even when we know they are diseases. As soon as the fit was over the public realized that it had been buncoed or, rather, that it had buncoed itself. Hanging the Kaiser was seen as nothing but an imbecile step toward bringing sympathy to his cause. That Germany should pay the entire cost of the war was seen as a sheer impossibility.

Time passed and more was seen. It was realized that there was a limit not only to what Germany could pay but also to what amount of reparation would help the countries receiving it. Slowly it came to be understood that in the relation of reparation to home industry and to foreign trade lay problems theretofore suspected only by a few.

FRENCH AWAKEN SLOWLY.

In France the awakening is coming more slowly and it is held back by peculiar political conditions. France is naturally more frightened than Great Britain, and very is a shifty basis for constructive politics. Apparently nobody can remain at the head of the government today in either England or France without extraordinary agility. Briand is the Lloyd George of France. He is perhaps the second in ability among the political tricksters of the world. The liberal elements in France do not like his present attitude, but they know he is liberal at heart and they also know that if he fails Poincare, Foch and the extreme reactionary group represented by the Echo de Paris will take his place.

In Germany there is the opposite to this disease of victory. There is the disease of desperation. Some elements in Germany are skulking like punished children. Others, at the two political extremes, gloat over the difficulties of the moderate government, the Communists dreamings of their revolution, the Junkers watching for a swing of popular sympathy towards despotism. This despotic element shows its hand, now as always, in stirring up an acute wave of anti-Semitism, that unfailing trick of the reactionary elements all over Europe.

PATHETIC PEACE LONGING.

Experience since the armistice has proved enough things on which to take the new settlement. Such things are: The seizing of the Ruhr Valley would be the depth of folly. France would face a situation exactly parallel to the situation England faces in Ireland. On a reasonable settlement France would have plenty of protection in the one fact that Germany needs absolutely the raw materials that Germany and the United States control, and in the further fact that Germany craves and must regain the confidence of the world.

Germany knows she must pay something around fifteen billion dollars. She wants to be reassured against invasion, concerted penalties, and deprivation of raw material.

Silliness, the foremost business man of Germany, is right when he declares that if politics could be cut out, an arrangement could be made around a table without delay. It is the delicate, but easily possible, function of Harding and Hughes to put Germany and France up against these simple fundamentals. Both have appealed to us.

Woman Slayer First to Face Woman Jury

Mrs. Cora I. Orthwein, divorcee, who shot and killed Herbert P. Ziegler in her luxurious apartment, at No. 518 Surf street, Chicago, after they had attended a party at the Green Mill Gardens. She claims that Ziegler forced his way into the apartment during the early morning hours.

Chicago, April 25—The first trial by an all-woman jury of a woman accused of murder will be staged here May 16.

Mrs. Cora I. Orthwein, accused of the slaying of Herbert P. Zeigler, will face twelve members of her own sex when she tells her story, instead of the usual "twelve good men and true."

Prosecutor Heth asked for the women jury, pointing out that it is almost impossible to convict a good looking woman with a male jury in Cook County, and that only the old and ugly are found guilty.

Mrs. Orthwein is distinctly neither.

Benedict J. Short, her attorney, agreed to the all-woman jury in open court. He believes his client will get more intelligent and sympathetic treatment from a tribunal made up of members of her own sex. Judge Wilson, to whom the case has been assigned, stated he knew of no legal obstacle to a jury of women, and Clerk Parker at once began to call in a feminine ventre.

FIRE SHOTS AT DOCTOR'S AUTO

South End Physician and Companion Arrested After Thrilling Chase

After a thrilling auto chase along Broadway, South Boston, during which several pistol shots figured and in which a dozen policemen or more, at various times, participated, Dr. Thomas L. Stanton of No. 367 Massachusetts avenue and John R. Davis of No. 147 Worthington street were arrested.

BOTH PLEAD GUILTY.

In the South Boston Court, Stanton pleaded guilty to a charge of overspeeding and paid a $25 fine. Davis pleaded guilty to a charge of drunkenness and paid a $5 fine.

According to Patrolman Barrett of station 12, his attention was first attracted to the machine containing the two men while it was standing on the Strandway, near the yacht clubs. It is charged the occupants were attempting to start flirtations with several young women who were passing by.

Barrett, who is a motorcycle officer, ordered the men to drive to the Point station. They started to obey him. Barrett following on his machine. At G street, he declared, a whiskey bottle came hurtling at his head and when he stopped to pick up the evidence, Stanton, he charges, speeded up the auto and hit up a fast pace up O street and onto Broadway.

SHOTS PUNCTURE TIRE.

Barrett followed on his machine and when near the fleeing car at K street fired two shots from his automatic without apparent effect.

At G street he fired again and at Dorchester street he fired two more shots, puncturing a tire and mudguard.

At F street a dozen policemen, who were attempting to disperse a crowd, heard the shots and held up Stanton's car long enough for Barrett to arrest the occupants.

Garretson of No. 80 Magnolia terrace, president of the Garretson-Hills Investment Company; Carol Mather, ten years old, daughter of F. L. Mathers, No. 92 Magnolia terrace, vice-president of the American Brush Manufacturing Company, and Billy Hebert, aged three, son of William E. TWO FOREIGN WIVES IN NEW TRIANGLE CONVERSE BY CODE

RUYTS GOES TO JAIL FOR BIGAMY

Spouse No. 1, Mother of 12, Speaks Only Flemish, Wife No. 2, Only French

New York, April 25.—Herbert Thornton Andrews, Wall street broker, central figure of the "co-operative husband" drama of New Jersey, may have shocked all conventions into hysteria recently by bringing home wife No. 2 to live with wife No. 1 in the same house, but he was not alone in tracing a marital triangle.

Similar domestic geometrical figures feature another case coming to public notice in the last two days.

Anthony Ruyts, a Belgian ornamental iron worker, duplicated Andrews' almost step for step. His two wives lived together in a house in Brooklyn and the two women likewise worked for the same firm, theatrical costumers, in New York.

Wife No. 1 spoke only Flemish; wife No. 2 only French. They could not converse when together, but did manage to contrive a code by knocking upon wood.

MOTHER OF TWENTY.

Ruyts, who, unlike Andrews, is in jail, understands both Flemish and French. He told the women what it was necessary for them to know—and nothing more.

The unusual situation in the Brooklyn home prevailed for two months. Last Friday the Belgian was arrested after agents of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children had investigated his home. Wife No. 1, mother of twelve children, some dead and some living, had brought two girls with her from Antwerp when she joined her husband and wife No. 2 here and the children were put in a public school. Apparent neglect of the children brought about the investigation.

And since Ruyts' arrest the two women here continued to live in the Brooklyn apartment with seemingly a truce between them.

Ruyts was in Antwerp when the war began and was too old to enter the army. He dispossessed the German invaders and was jailed—he says he protested when some Germans mistreated the Belgian flag.

Escaping from jail, he made his way to Paris and met Mme. Marie Pierre-Lebar, a widow. They became friends.

Returning to Antwerp at the close of the war, he says, he inherited the wife of his new friend. His wife, he declares, had undergone two operations and could no longer bear him children. He reviewed the situation with her, he professes, and she consented that he should live with the Parisienne, who could be a wife to him.

"My wife did this for the love of me," Ruyts declared, but Mrs. Ruyts denies all his declarations.

WEDDED AT DOCK.

The Belgian returned to Paris and to Mme. Pierre-Lebar. They decided to come to America, arriving on New Year's Day, 1920. Immigration authorities refused them admittance unless they married and Ruyts and his companion were joined as man and wife by a missionary priest a few days later. Ruyts declared he was single.

Later Ruyts, hearing that his first wife was having a hard time, sent money for her to come to the United States. She arrived with the two girls.

Ruyts is held in $1,000 bail on a bigamy charge.

Some of the present day fashions declared immodest by Boston students, who have started a campaign calculated to bring joy to advocates of "blue laws."

"Blue Law" advocates and ministers of grace to the contrary notwithstanding, modesty is not a lost art among the women of this country.

Right now a widespread movement is under way, sponsored by high school girls, no less, to inculcate the principals of modesty in girl students at institutions of learning.

The movement was started by the household arts class of the Washington High School, made up entirely of girls, who originated a list of "dont's" calculated to make Quakers out of every maiden who observes them. These "dont's" which are taken up by girls of this section, follow:

1 — Don't wear high heels or extreme shoes. Not only do they attract attention but they are hard on the system.
2 — Don't wear socks or stockings rolled down.
3 — Don't wear open-work stockings.
4 — If you must wear rolled-down stockings, don't powder your knees in public.

Whipping Might Solve Little Flirt Problem

Would a return of a family strap or slipper solve the problem of the little girls who flirt with strange men and parade the streets of Boston and other cities dressed like women of the half-world?

One of the adults to write into the Boston American in the discussion of the wisdom of whipping children of only age says quite forcibly today that it would. What do you think? What do you think of the advisibility of whipping children at all? The Boston American offers its columns for a debate of the general question. Please write plainly and on only one side of the paper. Address your letters to "Training Editor, Boston American, No. 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass." Below are extracts from a few of the letters already received:

SLIPPER FOR LITTLE.

Training Editor, Boston American:

As I walk along the streets of Boston at night and see girls fifteen, sixteen and seventeen years old with painted faces and knee-length skirts hailing young men in passing autos, I often wonder whether a more liberal application of the parental slipper on these eccentric youths' cases a less liberal use of paint on the other; whether the ease with which a short skirt as a buffer between body and slipper can be removed would not point out at least one advantage of longer skirts; and whether a well-paddled seat would not make joy-riding less enjoyable.

I will never forget my last thrashing. I was seventeen years old when my parents caught me in a lie. I was supposed to be staying with a girl friend and was detected with a high school boy at a movie show. They waited up for me. If my soiled escort lingered at the door he must have heard the melee, as I found myself adjourned across the parlor couch, clothing removed and a strap applied, in record time. It took me a long time to live it down, but it started me on the right track. Yours for the return of the family strap.

APPLIES KINDNESS.

Training Editor, Boston American:

I have never written to a newspaper before but this is a subject which I could not pass unnoticed. Talk of whipping children always arouses my fighting blood. I have never yet seen corporal punishment used to any avail; further, I have never seen a strap used as a means to correct. In fact, applied with force it is used merely as an outlet of temper. My idea of correction is kindness. My home is the center for the neighbors' children. Among them is a small girl of six, usually referred to as naughty, saucy and bold. But when she is with me she is a good girl. I do not strap her nor tell her continually what a bad girl she is. She tries to live up to my idea of her. As for Mrs. L.'s neighbor, I have nothing but scorn for her. Any mother who would hand over her child to be whipped by a neighbor would get a good strapping herself.

MRS. TERESA WHITE.

LASH BRINGS SORROW.

Training Editor, Boston American:

I, a mother of three, say "No not whip children. It brings more sorrow in after life than it does good. Three years ago this same question came up in the town where we were living. We visited prisons and homes for wayward girls there. In the case of each girl whipping at home had played a part. They had first started staying away from home and then run away from home; got into bad company and gone on down until the law reached out and claimed them.

Allston. A GRANDMOTHER.

WHIPPING UNNECESSARY.

Training Editor, Boston American:

I believe corporal punishment should be stopped in the state. There are other methods too numerous to mention to bring children to the right viewpoint. Why don't you give this subject a place on the front page as I believe it would help to stop the unnecessary whipping of boys and girls.

A DAILY READER.

HAIR BRUSH EFFECTIVE.

Training Editor, Boston American:

Although I do not believe in whipping children for trivialities I am thoroughly convinced that to spare the rod is to spoil the child. I have two girls and a boy, aged ten, twelve and fifteen years. I have found that while coaxing and reprimands will sometimes fail to bring the desired results, a good old-fashioned application of a hair brush for misdeeds is always effectual. A neighbor of mine with five children was once a foe of whipping. As a result her children would not mind. I was present one day when two of them were very naughty, and on my advice she took them across her knee and administered a good spanking with a slipper. They have been model children since.

MRS. H. M. MERRILL.
East Providence, R. I.

INSTILLS DECEIT.

Training Editor, Boston American:

I do not believe in using the rod on a child of any age. It instills deceit, cunning and hatred of the parent. It drives the youngster away from the father and mother instead of drawing him or her closer. Abusive treatment at home drives many boys and girls away from home. Parents who subscribe to the whipping theory are often too impulsive to use discretion. Some are even barbarous, harsh as that may sound. They fly into rages instead of trying to reason things out. Whipping is as often an illustration of lack of self control on the part of the parent as it is of a desire on the part of that parent to instil self control into the child.

ORGY OF WASTE IN PARIS

Incredible Sums Waged Daily on Races as Currency Is Inflated

By C. F. BERTELLI.
Special Correspondent of the Boston American.

Paris, April 25.—While the French government is desperately trying expedient after expedient to raise the 39,000,000,000 francs necessary for this year's budget, society in Paris is indulging in an orgy of extravagance, gambling unbeaten in the history of the republic.

With private homes on the Avenue du Bois Pasy transformed into miniature casinos where bejewelled women play nightly at baccarat and poker instead of bridge, the passion for risking large sums has extended even to the poorer people.

Incredible sums are wagered daily on the races. The reason for this is said to be the inflation of the currency by which everybody in France has ostensibly five times more cash than before the war.

Mushroom millionaires are springing up daily with each drop in the value of the franc. The Sunday dinners at the Ritz, which had become known as the smartest functions in Europe, have degenerated into an exposition of bare backs, barbaric jewels, fat wallets and ostentatious clothing.

Among the habitues at the Ritz are many Americans, including Mabel Gilman Corey, for the opening of whose Villegenis Chateau all society is awaiting. She was dressed the other night as "Carmen," he role in which she always aspired during her career on the stage.

Harry Symes Lehr was as usual leading the jass band, while Elsie Janis and her mother entertained Frank Gould and his fiancee, Florence Trask. Frank Gould has pledged his Apollo Theatre for Elsie's new production.

James Norton Winslow, leader of the young old set was especially conspicuous. A group of debutantes were insisting upon teaching him the steps of the new dance—the Girondelle—despite the fact that his eighty years necessitate the use of a cane.

15-MILE LIMIT FOR WORK HORSE ENTRIES

DENOUNCE PLAN FOR OPEN SHOP

Labor Men Accuse Employers of Attempt to Destroy Trades Unions

Charges that big business was endeavoring to destroy the trades union movement in America and that the open shop meant a slave shop were made by speakers at a mass meeting held in Ford Hall under auspices of the Trade Union Defence Council of Greater Boston.

Resolutions declaring that "an un-American, un-Christian and immoral conspiracy organized by powerful financial interests to destroy the trade organizations existed under the guise of the open shop" were adopted with enthusiastic applause.

Continuing the resolutions declared:

"The success of this attempt will mean the lowering of American standards of living of the toiling masses of our country, the return of industrial discontent and turmoil, and the establishment of an industrial oligarchy that will destroy the happiness and contentment in the homes of American workers.

"Wherefore, it is resolved, that this meeting declares its opposition to such a policy as being economically unsound and against all American standards of right and justice that preserve human rights as against property rights and the human being against the almighty dollar; and be it further resolved that this meeting endorses the activities of the Trade Union Defence Council in exposing this conspiracy on the part of selfish business interests in this country."

John J. Kearney, business agent of the Cooks and Waiters Union No. 34, denounced the attitude of big business against the trades unions as un-Christian and unholy.

"It is unethical, immoral, unpatriotic, wrong," he exclaimed in sarcastic tones, "to join a trade union or must he destroyed therein afraid civilization will collapse if the workers are allowed to organize.

HARTFORD TO BE 'IN REBELLION'

Connecticut Legislature to Outlaw Capital for Daylight Saving Stand

Hartford, Ct., April 25.—The capital of Connecticut will be declared "in a state of rebellion" by resolution of the State Legislature tomorrow, according to indications today.

In place of employing the usual accompaniments and machinery of rebellion—bombs, hand-grenades, guns and ammunition—the rebellious citizen of Hartford Sunday morning deliberately proclaimed the revolt by turning the clock ahead one hour in open defiance of the State Legislature, which, under the domination of rural districts and small towns, passed a law recently prohibiting any municipality from passing a daylight saving ordinance.

The shift of New York and Boston to daylight saving time and the consequent change in time put into effect by the New Haven Railroad really forced Hartford to adopt the new schedule, but the Legislature can't see it that way at all. Representative Adrianne H. Wadsworth of Farmington has already introduced a resolution which threatens all sorts of "reprisals" against the rebellious city of Hartford.

The Legislature is expected to pass the resolution tomorrow, but indications were today that there will be no weakening in the "rebel" ranks even in the face of this drastic action by the Legislature.

These men, he said, are carrying out a policy of extermination that appals the world.

Peggy a Paragon, Her Lawyer Avers

Chicago, April 25.—Peggy Hopkins Joyce isn't frivolous and is as respectable as her husband charges. At least that is what Waymouth Kirkland says. Mr. Kirkland is her attorney. He will be associated with William Nelen, the New York attorney defending Peggy in the action for divorce brought by J. Stanley Joyce, Chicago department store millionaire.

Attorney Kirkland said Peggy admitted to him she had danced with Harry Pilcer in Paris. But it was only because Mr. Joyce told her to, according to Peggy.

Mrs. Joyce is really a serious minded little woman and not the frivolous little fool she spends most of her time spinning around Europe with every one she met, her lawyer intimated, charges, exclaimed Mr. Kirkland.

DIVIDENDS FOR WAR VETERANS

The War Risk Bureau continues to be the largest insurance organization in the world, it was asserted, with a total of $4,125,000,000 of insurance in force upon the lives of 600,000 former service men and women, veterans of the World War.

WOMAN SOUGHT IN BOMB CASE

Detectives Trail Sweetheart of Ligi in Hope of Shattering Alibi Testimony

Scranton, Pa., April 25.—Here are the three outstanding developments today in the case of Tito Ligi who has been identified as the man who stood by the wagon in the Wall street explosion.

A young woman by the name of "Betty" is being sought by the detectives. They say she is Ligi's sweetheart, and if they succeed in finding her, that means to get valuable information about Ligi's movements last September when the bomb outrage was committed.

Attorney Walter Nealon of New York, who is taking an active part in the defense of Ligi, is said to have discovered twelve witnesses who will swear that Ligi was in Scranton on the day of the explosion.

An open break with considerable bitterness on both sides, has occurred between the city police and the agents of the Department of Justice, both of whom are working on the case. Each faction claims that the other side is trying to do a "double cross" to claim an undue share of credit.

Local rumor of the mysterious "Betty," who disappeared on the night of Ligi's arrest led to a small milling town named Old Forge, a few miles down the valley from Scranton.

The detectives did not find the girl, but others in this village led them on to Wilkesbarre, where she was supposed to be in hiding with friends.

Detectives continued their search of the neighborhood of Ligi's home today, and again visited the abandoned mine where a gang of anarchists is supposed to have had mysterious meetings nightly and where bombs are said to have been made and tested.

ENTER NOW FOR BICYCLE RUN

Boston American's Second Annual Outing Is Set for May 15

ride from the starting point, Copley Square. Because of the difficulty experienced by the police last Fall in keeping the crowd back from the roadway where the various events were staged, an effort is being made to obtain a suitable park with grandstand as the destination of next month's run.

EVERYTHING IS FREE.

The bicycle editor wishes to impress several things upon persons desiring to take part in the run. In the first place, there will be no racing. Parents need have no fear of permitting their children to join the other riders. Racing will be strictly forbidden as the idea is to have a pleasant outing. The bicycle editor assures mothers and fathers that their little sons and daughters will be properly cared for. There will be sufficient police protection.

Everything connected with the ride will be free. No charge will be made for anything. Everybody is invited. We don't care what kind of bicycle you ride or how old it is. As long as you can sit astride and pedal it slowly for six or eight miles you are entitled to become one of the antrants.

FOR YOUNG AND OLD.

We want to see all the little boys and girls in Boston and vicinity take part in the ride and we also want their grandfathers to take their old high wheels from the attic, oil them up and join the party. These high wheel riders will be given a special place in the line, and, as their sires are new to the present generation, will undoubtedly make a hit.

Many of the older devotees of cycling, who rode to Chestnut Hill reservoir every Sunday in the "good old days," are expected to be present during the Boston American run. A large number of them went last September and thoroughly enjoyed themselves. They renewed the acquaintance of men and women they had not seen for years. They frankly admitted that it was a big day for them. The Boston American hopes every man, woman and child who took part in the run last Fall will plan to be present on May 15 next.

FILL OUT COUPON.

For the purpose of making necessary arrangements the bicycle editor would like to have every person who intends to take part in the Boston American's bicycle run fill out the entry coupon, giving name, age and address. The coupon will be found in an adjoining column.

Don't forget the date—Sunday afternoon, May 15. Everybody is welcome.

NOW FEAR O'DALY TOOK OVER $40,000

O'Daly had taken $34,900 and from that time to July 1, 1920, he took $5,100 more. These amounts were covered entirely and in haste were made by Paymaster Edward J. Sullivan, who has been suspended.

No request was received from Sullivan today for a public hearing on his suspension, and the city officials said they did not expect any.

Benjamin S. Turner, seventy years old and for nearly forty years employed in the city treasurer's office, was today appointed temporary cashier by Treasurer Murray. Turner, who has been in the employ of the city for fifty-two years, is the only time cashier, being succeeded by O'Daly. Turner has since been recalled to help O'Daly, according to Treasurer Murray.

Employes in the treasurer's office today denied statements made by Paymaster Sullivan to the effect that Treasurer Murray was absent a great deal and left the conduct of the office to O'Daly.

They declared that Treasurer Murray was on hand the greater part of the time and an investigation would show that all of the time cards and checks.

They also declared that O'Daly had no initiative and would not order a box of pencils without the treasurer's permission.

They further stated that O'Daly and Sullivan, who was formerly a telegrapher in a brokerage house, warned their fellow employes against the danger of stock speculation.

Reported to Have Agreed on Yap Settlement If Mandate Is Recognized

Special Cable to the International News Service and the London Daily Express.

Tokio, April 25.—The Japanese government, it was reliably reported today, has agreed to settle the controversy over the island of Yap upon the basis of the following compromise:

1—The United States to recognize the validity of Japan's mandate over Yap Island.

2—Japan to recognize America's cable rights.

The United States had laid claim to the cable station on Yap Island because it is the only direct line of communication between America and the Philippine Islands.

NORTH ADAMS FOLK FACE "BLUE MONDAY"

North Adams, April 25.—"Blue Monday" was in prospect for scores of householders in this city today as a result of announcement made by Commissioner of Public Works J. L. Temple that he will shut off water on the premises of persons whose names were given him by Tax Collector James O'Halloran. The list comprises names of those who have not paid water rents for the last quarter.

The schooner Mayflower, Boston's candidate for defender of the International Fishermen's trophy won in the races off Halifax last Fall by the Esperanto, proved herself a likely craft on her first trial spin in Massachusetts Bay, and fully confirmed the hope of her owners that the cup will be retained by America in the next contest.

Put through paces under weather conditions which gave her every opportunity to show her finest qualities, it was the enthusiastic opinion of old-time shipping masters who witnessed the tryout, that the prospective defender is a much faster boat than the Esperanto.

A STRONG WIND BOAT.

It was agreed that the new schooner is likely to do her best in smooth water and strong winds, but she may also prove a wonder on the wind and running.

Outside Boston Light Captain Larkin set his course for the lightship and with seventy-five guests aboard the Mayflower poked her nose into the rollers and walked out to weather in masterly fashion.

WHISTLES GREET WELCOME.

All the way down the harbor the new craft was greeted with welcoming whistles from steam craft of every description.

It is expected that by Thursday she will be able to start on her first trip to the banks to qualify as a bona fide fishermen.

Among those on board during the trial trip were F. Roy Pigeon, rigger and head of the syndicate which owns the Mayflower; John F. James, her builder; F. C. Ratsey, sailmaker, W. Starling Burgess, the designer, Cornelius Wood of Boston, Russell A. Alger of Detroit, Junius P. Morgan, Paul Hammond, Reginald D. Beardman, R. A. Boardman of New York, Herbert M. Sears, commander of the Eastern Yacht Club, Frank L. Paine, M. D. Connolly and Lawrence F. Percival.

ELOPERS TO PART FOR 3 YEARS

Dartmouth Man and His Bride to Obey Orders and Go Back to School

smile as he beheld the girl. The next moment he had her in his arms, kissing her tenderly as a father would his daughter.

It was decided that Dick, who left Dartmouth following his wedding, should resume his studies in the Fall. At the same time Kate will enter some finishing school, and when they have both completed their courses they will settle down in a little home of their own.

ELOPERS ARE JUBILANT.

The elopers were jubilant at the reception they received. Kate was beaming, and nodded assent as her youthful husband, a strikingly handsome chap, with black hair, brown eyes and bronzed complexion, let it be known that his father approved of the match after he got the first glimpse of the fair bride. As Dick put it, and the pride blushed as he said it:

"Dad thinks she's great. I knew right well that if there was an objection it would be overcome immediately he saw Kate. And I wasn't mistaken, was I, Kate?"

"And I want to put this right—I didn't know that Kate had a cent in the world belonging to her when I decided that she was the one girl in the world for me. Did I, Kate? In fact, Kate really didn't know that her father was as wealthy as he is reputed to be. It was only recently that she learned she was to share in $1,250,000, but as for myself, I never knew anything about it until I saw it in the newspapers last week."

Whereat Kate interrupted:

"Money means nothing to us, does it, Dick? And I want you to say just what Dick tells you—that he didn't know anything at all about my father's estate. Honest and true, I never told him. And I'll tell you straight, I'd rather have Dick than all the money in the wide world. You believe me, Dick, don't you?"

And Dick answered "yes" with a smile.

ATHLETICS TO FEATURE AT E. H. S. CENTENARY

Thus early the plans of the committee on athletic meet of the centenary celebration of the English High School in June have taken shape. The school has been pretty strong in its representation of the sports, and it is natural for the meet to be considered worth an effort. A strong committee with W. T. A. Fitzgerald, '87, for its chairman, reports to the celebration committee that, thanks to the co-operation of the Harvard Athletic committee, the use of the Stadium and the adjoining baseball field is tendered for the afternoon of June 15.

The events will include in the interscholastic group 100-yard dash, 220-yard dash, 440-yard dash and 880-yard dash, while at the present time arrangements are under way for relay races by school teams. The open prospect events will include one-mile race, 100-yard, 440-yard and 600-yard dash, with relay races still to be scheduled. Some amateur boxing bouts are in prospect.

New York, April 25.—At 10 o'clock Thursday morning the greatest circus parade ever witnessed will start from Madison Square Garden, where the Ringling Brothers-Barnum Bailey circus is showing.

It will be New York's first big circus parade in twenty years.

There is talk of declaring a half holiday so that no school child need miss the great spectacle when twenty-eight units of the great show, from elephants to midgets with a hundred clowns, will march to Fifty-ninth street and back.

The parade was the idea of Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, chairman of the mayor's committee of women, which has set Thursday as a big day for the Milk Fund for Undernourished Babies.

DEAN SLANDER SUIT OPENS

$10,000 Action Brought by Rich Against Assemblyman Boynton on Trial

Keene, N. H., April 25.—The slander suit for $10,000, brought against Edward C. Boynton, a selectman of East Jaffrey, by Judge Charles L. Rich of the same town, in which the latter declares Boynton connected him unfavorably with the famous Dean murder case, opened today before a civil jury in the Cheshire County Superior Court, Judge John Allen presiding.

It is expected that all the incidents leading up to and since the murder of Dr. William Kendrick Dean will be disclosed officially for the first time.

Expecting sensational developments, many people, mostly from East Jaffrey, were on hand early. The courtroom was crowded an hour or more before the trial started.

Boynton, at the taking of depositions preliminary to the trial, admitted that he had stated that Judge Rich knew a lot about the murder if he cared to tell it. He denied that he had said that Rich killed the aged doctor.

An effort had been made by the plaintiff to obtain a change of venue to Hillsboro County on the grounds that he would not get a fair trial in this county. The motion was defeated and the examination of witnesses was begun.

Robert Mugrhie of the firm of Murchie & Murchie, Concord, appeared as counsel for the defendant. Judge Rich was represented by Robert W. Upton of Concord and Orville S. Cain of Keene.

This is the first time that any foreign correspondent was ever called to assist in the preparation of diplomatic exchanges by any European country.

$5,000 TEST CLOSES WEDNESDAY

Participants in the $5,000 Movie Play Title Test who regularly receive the Special Edition Extra will find in that edition of the Boston American on Wednesday two Title Test Pictures—Nos. 57 and 58—instead of one.

The names of each edition of the Boston American will be found in the upper right-hand corner of page 1. As features like the Title Test the Special Edition Extra does not always follow the calendar of other editions. In this case the difference will be made up on Wednesday, when Special Edition Extra folk will receive two Test Pictures at once. This will give them as much time to mail their parcels of Titles as anybody else will have.

As the delightful entertainment draws to a close and the curtain begins to drop the Test Editor again finds himself up to his neck in mail. At 2 o'clock Saturday morning he cleared the decks, only to find another bag of letters on his return.

TIPS TO CONTESTANTS.

Some who are entitled to personal replies will not receive them as promptly as may be wished, but perhaps the troubles of many can be disposed of in a few paragraphs here in a sort of resume.

The title must be written under the picture and not in "list" form on a separate sheet of paper.

In cutting the picture from the paper it is not necessary to include the head-piece. Cut immediately below the printed matter. If you have done otherwise, however, let it stand and do not worry.

The "Favorite Theatre" line may be left blank if that is your preference. We asked for the name of your favorite motion-picture theatre. You may not have one.

Everybody has until midnight on Friday to get his parcel into the home Post Office. Never mind when the mail leaves. In some towns the last one sails out at noon. YOU have until midnight. We desire to be fair with everybody.

Those who prefer may bring their Titles to No. 80 Summer street or send them here by messenger. These parcels MUST be here not later than midnight on Friday. Other parcels must be dropped in the mails by that hour.

The Title Test Editor regrets his inability to be of service to those who are appealing for back numbers. We have not got them. Nor back lists of Titles.

It IS permissible to send in incomplete sets of Titles. The fact that you have fewer than 60 Pictures does not bar you from the Test. Your missing pictures will be counted as "incorrect."

You may, if you like, make pencil or pen-and-ink sketches of the Test Pictures. Some friend may have a complete set. Or the newsdealer will be glad to get you one. Each and every participant who has them. Get some tracing-paper. Make the copies you need.

DO NOT ROLL PICTURES

Please keep in mind the suggestion of the gentleman who will have charge of Title Test Headquarters. He asks you not to roll your Test Pictures, and not to fold them. Send them flat. Bear in mind that parcels which come to us with Postage Due will not be accepted. There will be some writing on every Test Picture. That places your parcel in the "letter" class. Send it as First Class mail. Take no chances.

If you have not read the Rules of the Test—and sad to ... many of you have not, as the Test Editor can testify—please read them now. Then you will find complete and detailed information about addressing your parcel.

The List of Titles for the last three days of the Test is somewhat longer than it has been. (Grand chorus: "Where do you get that 'some-what'?" But you must have noticed that there is ONE title in the List—and only one—for each of the last three pictures.

LAST THREE ARE "STICKERS."

Speaking frankly, the Title Test Artist believes these last three pictures to be "stickers." The writer does not agree with him. One of them is easy, one of them is "medium hard" and only the third is a knock-out. The writer is not classifying them in the order in which they will be printed.

The Title Test Editor is going to be sorry to leave you, never before in a somewhat busy newspaper life, has he been brought in such close touch with so many fine, resourceful and likeable people. His only regret is there will be only 219 awards to send out to you. If only he could send the top award of $1,000 to everybody on the list!

Mrs. M. E., Lynnfield Centre—Hope you are finding them easier as we near the end. Today's is almost simple. The best part of the Test will be the re-printing of the Pictures with the correct titles.

Leo R., Haverhill—I owe you an apology. I was wrong about pen-and-ink sketches. You were right. Participants have a perfect right to send in copies of the pictures. Am I pardoned?

F. B. S., Lewiston, Me.—There is no rule against pasting the pictures on both sides of the paper. Checkers and counters will find their work easier, however, if but one side of the sheet is used.

R. U., Worcester—Thank you.

U. C. B., Nashua—If you don't, Circe, Back Bay—Until midnight on Friday.

S. D., Dorchester—I mustn't tell.

A. T. H., Milton—Please do not blame me for the length of the list.

Lolie Bruce, Lester—Letter waited to me. The answer was eighty-four.

Bab, Woonsocket—Yours is a generous offer, to be sure, but only for participants, but I fear it is too late. Thank you, just the same.

F. S., Northpelter, Vt.—I find it there.

Lester, J. M., Somerville—Splendid! M. K., Jr., Fall River—If you want to help the checkers, and expedite the count, place No. 60 on the bottom and No. 1 on top.

A. M. J., Manchester, N. H.—It will be done, but not in exactly that way. One or two pictures every day.

Beri, Dorchester—That word is "Mayflower." Thank you for the cigars you are going to give me.

Ten of Us, Warrenton street—Your Mr. Baker must draw the pictures for the next Test.

Dorchester—You ask me six of the most teasing questions—and, beside me, an orator in the gabbiest old thing in the world. Listen, and I'll write the answers in invisible ink:

2—
3—
4—
5—
6—

But don't go around telling everybody.

A WORD TO EVERYBODY.

L. E. B., Worcester—"Hall." Wilbraham—Ditto.

Hahn of Troop G—Say, old scout, you must have bagged all the pretty goat cards on the Riviera. Did you win anything? I took your matter up with the C. O., and he says it will be impossible to make exceptions. I would suggest that you have somebody at the post mail them for you. You can pick the others up on your journey. Send none before the Test closes.

Jay Sea, Providence—Why, certainly, but you mustn't read her letters!

ALL BE HAPPY YET.

J. D., Worcester—I see nothing to find fault with in your method. In view of the fact that you are a participant I could not ask them to take you on at headquarters. Think it over. Wish you luck! Things are picking up. We'll all be happy yet, you bet!

F. W., Canton—One or two a day. Do be patient, uncle.

R. P. M., Charlestown—They will count as three "incorrect titles." If you do not have more than three incorrect titles, I sum promise you a pleasant Summer.

O. P. C., Springfield—The correct title for last Sunday's picture was printed in last Sunday's List of Titles, regardless of the ball in those three lines of type. It has been true from the beginning, and will be true to the end, that—every day—the correct title of today's picture is in today's list of Titles. I believe the title you have in mind is "Brand of the West." My goodness, but I like your initials! Can any little boy tell why Teacher likes the gentleman's initials?

George of Middleboro — Yes; cut them out and paste them on, but for the love of Michael write plainly.

Billie, Worcester—Quit kiddin'.

ONE TO ONE FAMILY.

Anxious Rutland Square—"Family" means "family," without reference to geography, except perhaps when one's Fondest Love leaves for Reno. One award to one family. Give somebody else a chance; there are only 219 awards and lots—nine of them—are worth writing home about.

E. J. B., Bridgewater—To the best of my knowledge and belief, yes, sir.

Mac, Dorchester—Not in one instalment.

W. G. L., Medford—"Price." Where have you been?

Letters will delay the Titles from day to day and at the end of the Test, as many letters will be received that it will be impossible to read them. In all instances the Titles will not be a factor in same. The Movie Play Title Editor of the Boston American and the Test closes will stand no better than any other contestant.

All envelopes or packages containing titles must be plainly addressed as follows: Movie Play Title Editor, Room 80, 209 Summer Street, Boston, Mass., and must have written on the upper left-hand corner of the envelope the name and address of the sender legibly written so that there can be no mistake about it.

Healthy Young Womanhood

THE tendency to constipation begins with girls as they approach maturity, and that is the very time the mother should watch that the important function of daily elimination is regular and normal.

Many thousands of mothers who have daughters will tell you they give only Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. A teaspoonful is sufficient to relieve constipation and its commoner symptoms such as headache, bad breath, biliousness, loss of appetite and run less sleep.

Syrup Pepsin is a compound of Egyptian Senna and other simple laxative herbs with pepsin and pleasant-tasting aromatics, and a sixty-cent bottle is enough for many months. Eight million bottles were bought at drug stores last year, the largest sale of the kind in the world.

Freckles and Blotches Are Easily Peeled Off

If you are bothered with any cutaneous blemish, it's a poor plan to use paint, powder or anything else to cover it up. Too often this only emphasizes the defect. Besides, it's much easier to remove the disfigurement with ordinary mercolized wax. Applied nightly, the wax will gradually remove freckles, pimples, moth patches, liver spots, sallowness, red blotches or any surface eruption. The affected cuticle is absorbed, little by each day, until the clear, soft, youthful and beautiful skin beneath is brought wholly to view. Ask the druggist for one ounce of mercolized wax and use this like you use cold cream. Remove in morning with soap and water. Many who have tried this simple, harmless treatment report astonishing results.

If troubled with wrinkles or furrows, a wash lotion made by dissolving one ounce powdered saxolite in one-half pint witch hazel, will make them disappear very quickly.—Advertisement.

OLGA PRINTZLAU

"AND when you see her, tell her, please, that Lewis Sargent says 'Hullo!'"

That's the first impression we got about Olga Printzlau. Young Lewis Sargent, who first won fame when he played the role of "Huck Finn" in the film version of Mark Twain's story, made the remark at the Metro Studio in New York, where he was playing in Frances Marion's new Cosmopolitan picture, "Just Around the Corner."

"Gee, she's a peach!" he described her, in enthusiastic tones.

Therefore, we knew something about Miss Printzlau when we met her. She was William DeMille's scenarist and had worked out the continuity for nearly all of his great film successes, and Lewis Sargent said she was "a peach."

Later we delivered the message. "Lewis Sargent!" she exclaimed. "Is he in New York? Why, do you know, it was only about two years ago that he was one of the little office boys at the Lasky Studio on the coast! And now he's playing big roles in pictures and doing splendidly! He was a a great favorite at Lasky's.

"That's one of the best things about the movies. If you have any talent, you're found out and given a chance, just as he was.

GREW UP WITH MOVIES.

"For my own part," she went on, "I have been in the movie business almost since the beginning. Since the beginning of the present era of movies, I mean, not the days when they were crude things thrust upon a startled and disdainful world.

"We lived in Santa Barbara, about ten miles from Hollywood, where the movies were built up. I was interested in them even then. The studios were funny, ramshackle affairs and turned out two-reel dramas and comedies at the rate of one a week. Of course I wrote stories for them. Every one did. I sent dozens of scripts to all the studios and they all came back to me. Finally the Edison Company accepted one. That was the beginning for me.

BECAME A FAMILY DEBUT.

"They needed a baby to play a prominent part in the story, and I promptly volunteered mine. Virginia was a few months old at the time and after that was known as the 'Edison baby.'

"You see, breaking into the movies was more or less of a family affair for the Printzlaus. Once we got into the studios, it wasn't hard to get them to consider the stories. I kept on writing and was finally taken on as regular author by the various studios. A few years ago I joined the Lasky forces and have been with them ever since, writing the continuity for William DeMille.

MUST PICK OUT MAIN THREAD.

"I usually adapt plays, original stories, or well-known novels to the screen for Mr. DeMille. It's interesting work. I'm given the story and from a study of it I pick out the main theme. When I wrote the continuity for 'What Every Woman Knows,' I saw that Barrie's idea was that no man gains success through his own efforts. Someone helps him, though he doesn't always realize it.

"The interesting part is thinking out the best ways to get the thoughts and tendencies of the story across to audiences without using quantities of sub-titles. Much of the photoplay is symbolical, for it is symbols that stand for actualities, and it is symbols that the public understands.

ILLUSTRATION IN "PRINCE CHAP"

"There was an interesting point in 'The Prince Chap' that illustrates what I mean. Thomas Meighan played in this and was supported by Kathlyn Williams as the Princess Alice and Lila Lee as Claudia. In the end the Princess Alice goes to Meighan after he has become a successful sculptor and tries to take up the threads. Where they had been dropped years before by her snobbishness and lack of confidence. He, however, realizes that it is too late, not only as far as she is concerned but as far as any woman is concerned. With a woman's intuition she sees that Lila Lee has come between them and knows that, for her, it is all over.

"There is the situation. It's only one short scene, but it could be made a strong one or else an utter failure. Here's how I worked it out. Lila Lee was found sewing. That shows the domestic touch as well as her position in the household. When the Princess Alice comes in, Lila drops the sewing and leaves.

USE OF SYMBOL.

"When Meighan comes in, they sit down. As they talk each realizes that she has no more hold over him. They idly wind the thread from Claudia's sewing, which is between them on the couch, around their fingers. When Alice rises to leave they find that both are winding the same piece. Meighan laughs and starts to break it, but Alice stops him. There is quiet for a moment, then she slowly and firmly breaks it.

"There is the symbol and no titles were necessary to explain what had happened. The bond between them has been broken off and, indirectly, by Claudia. Words would have been too crude to bring out the significance of the incident. I spent two days thinking out that scene for Mr. DeMille, and when it was done we felt that if it had been two years' work it would have been well worth it."

'ZE SPRING' GETS CODEE'S GOAT

Something Wrong With Season, Says Dancer in "Whirl of the Town"

"There is something wrong with ze Spring; it 'gets ze goat,' as you say," said Anna Codee, the French singer and dancer in "The Whirl of the Town."

"You said a mouthful, Anna," proclaimed Jimmie Hussey. "Br-rr. It's cold."

"Not so cold as the Globe Theatre was a few months ago, Jimmie," insinuated an actor, and started away rapidly. For Jimmie Hussey's Revue died of frost at the Globe during the past winter.

"Perhaps it's Boston weather, you don't like," the interviewer said to Miss Codee, disregarding the interruption.

"No, it is not Boston. It is everywhere. One day it is too cold, next it was too hot. You put on so woolen underwear today, remove it tomorrow. The next day you say 'achoo' and your head gets all choked up with a cold.

BIG GIRL WINS BIG SMILE.

Mlle. Codee shook her black bobbed head and laughed, a wide and cheerful laugh. She is a big girl, this young Frenchwoman, with broad shoulders and an air of strength. One thinks of French girls as small and dainty but here comes Delysia, and the late Gaby De Lys, as well as Mlle. Codee to prove that they grow 'em big in France. To be sure, Mlle. Codee is a Belgian, and you might as well call an American Englishman as call a Belgian French, though they speak the same tongue.

"You come from the Folies Bergere, do you not?"

"Yes, that is where I make my first what you call strike. No bit. Let me tell you. You have heard of Otero, La Belle Otero, the great Spanish actress."

"Yes, indeed. What's become of her? Is she dead?"

"Dead? Mais non. She is more beautiful than ever. A wonderful woman. One night at the Folies she falls ill. Her understudy is told to go on. The understudy gets what you call se cold feet. She refuse. Then the manager, in despair, looks around and sees me. I am nobody but I have my nerve. Will I take Otero's place. Sure Mike. I do and se public happens to like me. Viola.

"How do you have the nerve to do it?"

CHILD OF CIRCUS FAMILY.

"Let me tell you about me and my family. We have to have nerve. We are circus people. I was born in the circus in France. All my young life I ride bareback, and jump through hoops, and climb ladders and turn somersaults. If you have nerve enough to do those things, you can do anything.

"Now I just sing and dance and act. It is much easier, and I make more money. Have you noticed that in this world you get paid more for doing the easiest work? The laborer who works the hardest earns the least.

"I work hard and save my money to help my family which has suffered so much during the war. I have a grandfather ninety years old who lived in Brussels all through the German occupation. I do not think se Germans would kill anybody over eighty. But how terrible those four years were. You Americans haven't any idea how hard times are now this minute in Belgian and France. You are beginning to experience a very little now of what we have had since the war. The world has a headache, n'ce pas?"

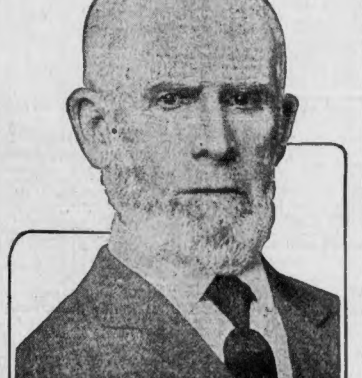
Quaker Minister Is Grateful to Tanlac



Rev. Parker Moon

Nearly everybody in Southwest Missouri either knows or has heard of the Rev. Parker Moon, who for a full half century has devoted his life and talents to Sunday school and organization work for the Society of Friends or Quakers.

"Uncle Parker," as he is more familiarly known, came from fine old rugged Quaker stock, and there is not a better known or more highly respected citizen in that part of the State. In referring to his remarkable restoration to health by Tanlac, he said:

"About five years ago I suffered a general breakdown, my principal trouble was nervous indigestion. My appetite was very poor and my food seldom agreed with me, and I had to live on a very restricted diet. I suffered a great deal from headaches and dizzy spells; I had severe pains across the small of my back and was badly constipated most of the time. In fact, I was so weak and rundown I was not able to attend to my duties.

"This condition made me very nervous and I could not sleep at night. Frequently I would lie awake most all night, and was in that condition more or less for five years. My physician said he could not do anything for me and suggested a change of climate. I then moved to Texas and went back and forth three times, but did not get the relief I had hoped for. Finally, I got so bad off I was not able to get around with any degree of comfort. I was also told I had heart trouble.

"I had read about Tanlac and, as it had been very highly recommended to me, I decided to try it. I got a bottle and had taken only a few doses until I could notice a marked improvement in my condition. I noticed especially that I was not troubled anywhere with sour stomach after eating, which was a great relief to me.

"I kept on taking Tanlac until I fully regained my health. My appetite is splendid; I enjoy my meals and I do not find it necessary now to take any laxative medicine of any kind. I can sleep much better and feel generally so improved.

"I take great pleasure in recommending Tanlac to anyone who needs a good system builder, or who suffers with stomach trouble. I have recommended Tanlac to a great many of my friends and am pleased to reach others by giving this statement for publication."

Tanlac is distributed by International Proprietaries, Inc., and sold in Boston by all Liggett's drug stores.—Adv.

Teeth You Love to Show

Find out how millions get them

This offer is to women who desire to look their best. To men who find that tobacco stains, etc., make their teeth look dingy. To young folks who know what beauty lies in glistening teeth.

It is to all who have learned that old methods are wrong. And that, despite the tooth brush, teeth discolor and decay.

Clouded by a film

Teeth are clouded by a dingy film. At first it is viscous—you can feel it. It clings to teeth, gets between the teeth and stays.

Old ways of brushing do not effectively combat it. Much of the film remains. Then night and day it may do ceaseless damage. Most tooth troubles are now traced to film, and those troubles have been constantly increasing.

It is the film-coats that discolor, not the teeth. Film is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Also of other serious troubles, local and internal.

Science combats it

Dental science, after long research, has found ways to combat film. Able authorities have amply proved them. Now leading dentists, here and abroad, advise their daily use.

These effective methods are embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. Thus one may twice a day apply them in a most delightful way. Millions already do this, and to them it has brought a new era in teeth cleaning.

Three other effects

Modern authorities find that a tooth paste should also bring other effects. This to cope with the average diet, rich in starch and low in fruit acids.

So Pepsodent stimulates the salivary flow—Nature's great tooth-protecting agent. It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva—put there by Nature to digest starch deposits that cling. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva—Nature's neutralizer of the acids which cause decay.

These are natural results, but modern diet often fails to bring them. This tooth paste brings them, at least twice a day.

Note the white teeth

Note the glistening teeth you see. Ask how people get them. You will find, we think, that most of them are due to Pepsodent.

But this is more than a question of beauty. Those whiter teeth mean cleaner, safer teeth. To young and old they mean better tooth protection.

It means more to children than adults. Young teeth are most easily attacked. Very few children escape. So dentists advise that Pepsodent be used from the time the first tooth appears.

Let one person try it in your home. Then show the results to all.

You'll quickly see

The Pepsodent results are very quickly apparent. Some are almost instant. A ten-day test is usually convincing.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear. Watch the other good effects.

The test will be a revelation. The book we send will explain each new effect. Then judge by results, and their scientific basis, what is best for you and yours. Cut out the coupon so you won't forget.

32 Bracelets on Arm Paris Sensation

Paris, April 25.—Mrs. Richard Owen, grandaughter of Judge Hilton of New York, has sprung a sensation. She is wearing thirty-two bracelets, reaching above the elbow. She is being quite outdone, however, by a portly matron whose shoulder is adorned by a tattooed butterfly.

Another furore is caused by a red-haired beauty who is wearing a sacerdotal robe, explaining that it was given to her by a priest. Another wears a Chinese mandarin robe with her hair arranged on her temples, maiden fashion.

The greatest sensation of all, however, is reserved for an anonymous beauty, who conceiving the idea of revealing nature, has a new "falling leaves" dress. She wears no stockings, but has sandals. Realizing that she need, some adornment for contrast, she is wearing a painted garter an inch above her knee, the garter being of an imitation leaf. It caused many exclamations of admiration while she was fox trotting.

many heads would direct the fight on the unions.

The trustees today repeated earlier statements that they did not want a strike and were not trying to break the unions by announcing a 20 per cent wage cut for May 2. Necessary retrenchment and lower fares were their sole motives, they said.

James H. Vahey, general counsel for the carmen, issued a statement, attacking the Eastern Massachusetts for seeking to "destroy unionism and the right of collective bargaining."

He contrasted the attitude of the Eastern company with that of the Elevated trustees, who he said, "treat their 10,000 employes like human beings."

Mr. Vahey denied that he had used his influence to persuade the men to vote for a strike.

PAID $52,000 IN BAY STATE DEAL

Legal Services in Reorganization of Road Costly, L Probe Discloses

More than $52,000 was paid for legal services in the reorganization of the old Bay State street railway, in addition to 19,951 for legal expenses.

This fact was brought out at the resumption of the Elevated scandal probe today.

Special Counsel Taft, for the joint legislative committee, started work today on the single check fund, and to have been raised for aiding passage of street railway legislation in 1919.

Archibald R. Graustein, member of the law firm of Hopes, Gray, Borden and Hooper, was the first witness called.

He testified that his firm acted as counsel for a committee of bankers, banks, stock holders and minor clients, among whom was the firm of Harris, Forbes and Company of States street, in the reorganization of the old Bay State Street Railway.

"Our firm felt it was entitled to more money," testified Mr. Graustein, "but we accepted $52,500 for our legal services."

This sum, the witness explained, was in addition to $9,951.60 received from the committee for legal expenses connected with the reorganization. Of this last amount the firm has still a balance of $2,252.70, said Mr. Graustein.

The witness went into considerable detail regarding the difficulty of the reorganization task assumed by his firm, saying that at times the company had as many as twenty-six lawyers working on the task, which involved more than $75,000,000 worth of securities.

"Not one cent of the money we received for expenses went to any one who should not have received it," said Mr. Graustein, and proceeded to give an itemized statement of the manner in which the expense fund was expended.

Referring to Roland W. Boyden, a member of the firm, Mr. Graustein said that in 1919 Governor Coolidge appointed him, Boyden, as a member of a special recess committee to investigate street railway conditions throughout the State.

Boyden, he witness added, tendered his resignation from this body to the Governor, owing to the criticism of his firm for having accepted the $52,500 fee for their services in connection with the Bay State reorganization.

Governor Coolidge declined to accept Boyden's resignation, continued the witness.

Referring once more to the fee, Mr. Graustein declared that "the Bay State never got legal services so cheaply, and our firm would not undertake such work again for such a public duty. Any one who would take the responsibility of the Bay State road would have been beyond the pale."

Questioned about Representative Henry L. Shattuck, member of the investigating committee, and former member of the law firm, and who has been subpoenied to continue his criticism, Mr. Graustein said:

"Mr. Shattuck was a member of our firm until December 31, 1918, at which time he resigned to go into public life. He felt that it would be wise not to be connected with the firm after undertaking public work. Personally, we all felt Mr. Shattuck would never be influenced by any work our firm might be doing, but he was of different mind."

"Then the charges of his bias are unfounded?" asked Senator Hardy of the committee.

"Entirely," declared the witness.

WOMAN BEATEN BY ROBBER

Victim of Dorchester Attack Near Death at City Hospital

by a holdup man on Southampton street.

The woman, who was on the way to visit Mrs. J. McDonald of No. 37 Buttonwood street, Dorchester, received her injuries when she refused to give up her handbag, which was seized by her assailant.

With her skull fractured and her face and body bearing marks of a vicious beating, Miss Murray was found in the yard of the Central Construction Company by Michael J. Carney, a city water department night employe on his way from home to work in the Albany street yard nearby.

WAS RETURNING FROM CHURCH

His attention was attracted by her groans. He found her semi-conscious and sitting on the ground. Carney rushed to the City Hospital from where an ambulance was sent and Miss Murray's name passed on the danger list.

At the hospital Miss Murray revived long enough to describe her assailant as about nineteen years old, light complexioned, good looking and wearing a gray cap.

She had never seen him before the moment when he stepped out of the construction company yard and accosted her in the dark as she was returning from the night service at the Immaculate Conception Church on Harrison avenue.

A terrific struggle followed. Miss Murray fought desperately against being dragged into the yard. The youth raised blows upon her and she fell unconscious. A rock covered with blood was found near where she was lying, by the police.

The police declare robbery was evidently not the motive of the attack, her pocketbook with money untouched being found on the sidewalk.

Sergeants Horton and Davis of Dudley street station found several persons who recalled seeing a youth resembling the one described by Miss Murray in the vicinity of the attack before it occurred.

NEW ENGLAND TRADE REVIEW

Manufacturing Plants Increase Operations

There can no longer be any doubt that the long-anticipated revival in business is here. From all over New England, as well as other sections of the country, come reports of better business conditions and greater confidence in the future stability of trade. Leading lines in the northeastern section—shoes, textiles, machinery and paper—are showing a definite trend towards normalcy.

Recent news from other centres of trade has been encouraging. Automobile companies, for instance, report a pronounced change for the better. Forty-one companies report grand sales for March of 3,346 cars as against only 1,648 in February and a scant 871 in January. Not a few dealers are predicting a shortage of cars next Summer.

The copper industry—long in the doldrums—seems to be convalescing. The Western Union Telegraph Company recently placed an order for 10,000,000 pounds of the red metal, and that is only a part of its requirements.

It may serve as a straw indicating that large consumers are beginning to thing that copper has struck bottom. The potential demand for copper is yet to be heard from and when Europe has been provided with the requisite credits, heavy orders may be expected by American copper producers.

BUYERS' STRIKE VANISHING.

That "buyers' strike" which gripped business for the last six months or so seems to be vanishing. As the factories resume and pay envelopes are restored to workmen, merchants need have no fear of disposing of their wares. And the price question is fast being decided on a lower scale at which people can buy.

Retail trade in fundamental lines is fairly good, in spite of the large number of persons out of work. Retailers and jobbers have been liquidating their stocks and are now calling on the manufacturers for replenishments, which, of course, are at a lower price scale.

SCRAMBLE WILL FOLLOW.

In fact, some are optimistic enough to predict an acute shortage in some merchandise lines before fall. Once the pendulum has swung far better business, the wild scramble to load up will start and then prices will rise in a corresponding measure.

New England stands foremost as the shoe centre of America. Reports seem to just around the corner for this industry. It is estimated by students of that line that retail sales all over the country are running about seventy-five per cent. of normal, whereas the wholesale business is running between fifty and sixty per cent. normal. Manufacturing of shoes has been running only about forty per cent. of normal.

But because of cleaning up of

DYE IMPORTS ON INCREASE

Germany Making Strenuous Effort to Regain Her Pre-War Supremacy

Washington, April 25.—The attempt of Germany to regain her pre-war supremacy in the dye industries, revealed in the statistics of German imports to the United States during the shutdown year 1920, was made public here today by the Department of Commerce.

Imports of chemicals valued at $6,707,383, or which $2,110,853 consisted of coal-tar dyestuffs, places that group second in the list of commodities, headed only by potash fertilizer materials, of which 425,855 tons were shipped into the United States.

The total imports from Germany are valued by the department at $30,536,230, as compared with $10,600,141 in 1919. This is nearly one-half the highest total of German imports before the war, which reached $185,542,440 in 1913.

In addition to these already named other large commodity items are sugar, mostly beet, with 32,446,696 pounds, valued at $5,847,886, toys to a value of $4,289,617, and cotton manufactures with $3,567,137, of which $1,668,461 consisted of knit gloves and stockings and $1,283,097 of laces and embroideries.

Raw, dressed and manufactured furs, with a total of $3,346,937; sugar beet seed, 9,418,296 pounds, worth $2,151,811; silk and artificial silk goods with $2,030,390, and aluminum and manufactures of with a total value of $1,617,060, are important items.

MILEAGE BOOKS BACK IF KAHN BILL PASSES

Washington, April 25.—Restoration of the railroad mileage books, for which the 800,000 members of the Commercial Travelers' Association have appealed to Congress, with the support of the Interstate Commerce Commission, has been ordered in a bill introduced in the House by Representative Kahn of California. Ultimate passage of the bill without opposition is predicted by congressional leaders.

20 P. C. PAY CUT MADE BY ENDICOTT JOHNSON

TECH STUDENTS' DEAN RESIGNS

Professor A. E. Burton Leaves June 15 Because of Wife's Illness

Alfred E. Burton, dean of students at Tech since 1902, has announced his resignation, effective June 15. His action was necessitated by the illness of his wife, who is in California, where Dean Burton will go upon completion of his duties.

Professor Burton became connected with the Institute as instructor in civil engineering in 1882. In 1886, he was made assistant professor in that department and ten years later became full professor of topographical engineering. When in 1902, the position of dean of students was created, Professor Burton was selected. During the war he was in charge of instruction in the three naval schools of the United States Shipping Board recruiting service.

Dean Burton was born in Portland, Me., in 1857, and was graduated from the engineering school of Bowdoin College in 1878, three years later receiving the degree of C. E. While at Bowdoin, he was the room mate of the late Admiral Peary. Professor Burton organized an expedition to North Greenland, where valuable pendulum and magnetic observations were made.

No successor to Dean Burton has been selected.

MEDFORD MAN DIES ON WEEK-END TRIP

Gloucester, April 25.—E. Louis Sullivan of Medford, spending the week-end with a party of friends at the cottage of Joseph Leydon at Eastern Neck, died suddenly after an attack of indigestion. Sullivan with his friends had partaken of a hearty lunch at one o'clock and about two hours later complained of not feeling well. A physician was called but when he arrived Sullivan was dead.

Big Crop in Kansas, But Not Early

Pratt, Kans., April 25.—"Harvest hands stay away from southwestern Kansas until the last ten days of June if you want to work the harvest."

This warning is being scattered broadcast by the Farm Bureau here today because of published reports that the great wheat harvest would begin early in June.

"All this talk of an early harvest is rot," said William Berg, president of the bureau. "In twenty years I have finished only ten days harvesting on July 4 only once. The rest of that time it was after that date."

A big yield is expected, but June 20 is predicted the earliest possible date for commencement of the harvest.

GRIEF FOR WIFE CAUSES SUICIDE

Despondency, growing out of protracted grief over the death of his wife a year ago, is believed to have led to the suicide of Edward Hall, 75, of No. 8 Sherman road, Melrose Highlands, found dead in an attic room of his home yesterday with a bullet through his head. Medical Examiner Perley pronounced the case death by suicide.

According to friends, Mr. Lewis never recovered from the blow caused by his wife's death about a year ago. He had lived alone in part of his house since. He was employed in a Boston bank.

Lyman of Boston has been appointed an honorary non-commissioned officer of the division and has been publicly decorated with the chevrons and the French fourragere.

The young woman, who is a sister of Colonel Cortland Parker, commanding the 26th Field Artillery, was now listed as Corporal Lyman, company B, 26th Infantry, and who thus is the further distinction of being the first woman ever to receive the rights of the famous division.

The unique honor and decoration was conferred upon Mrs. Lyman by Major-General Summerall, division commander.

Chicago, April 25.—Insurance companies are planning to raise their rates on burglary policies in Chicago. It was revealed here today, because of the inroads that robbers are making on their earnings.

Some of the insurance men say their losses run to 85 per cent. of their receipts in Chicago.

To back up their statements figures were produced to show that all companies were $900,000 in burglary premiums in Cook County last year and the amount of claims paid to policy holders totaled 85 per cent. of that amount. Operating expenses in this territory were 45 per cent. of the premiums.

DRY AGENTS TO LOSE JOBS

Department of Justice Will Take Over Enforcement; Bill Expected to Pass

Washington, April 24.—It has become practically certain that the proposed transfer of national prohibition enforcement to the Department of Justice will be made shortly after David H. Blair of North Carolina is confirmed as Commissioner of Internal Revenue. Prohibition Commissioner John F. Kramer admitted today.

This will mean the elimination of the present prohibition unit of the Department of Internal Revenue, and the letting out of a large number of agents and the employees now employed in enforcing prohibition. Mr. Kramer believes.

A bill authorizing transfer of prohibition enforcement to the Attorney-General's forces has been introduced in the House of Representatives by William B. Wood of Indiana, and has been referred to the House judiciary committee, of which Representative Volstead is chairman.

Mr. Volstead was first opposed to the plan, but now has been converted, and the measure is expected to pass the House without serious opposition.

Cotton Market Opening

New York, April 25.—With the opening of the cotton market was not materially changed from the close of last week, the initial quotations showing a decline of 5 to 11 points. The list reflected indifference generally and was influenced by the weakness in Liverpool and the break in stocks, which were also responsible for the lack of any noticeable demand current reports on which could be obtained. Spot cotton was quiet and unchanged. May 12.21 January 12.

COPPERS RISE IN BOSTON

Local Market Has Good Start and Maintains Tone; Curb Active and Irregular

Strength prevailed on the Boston exchange at the opening and the good tone was maintained during the morning. Packing issues and coppers advanced, but there was no life to New England rails. Trading was of fair volume and average breadth. But it was featureless during the forenoon. Calumet Hill was a leader and sold after making an early gain. Mexican Investment was another leader but had a narrow range. Calumet & Hecla advanced four points on its first transaction, selling at 500. Utah Apex, Warren Brothers, three and point gains were made by Arizona Silver Copper, Osceola, United Fruit, United Shoe and General Electric. Island Creek reacted a point.

OILS FIRST IN THE ADVANCE

Coppers, Steels, Motors and Tobaccos on Higher Level; Rails Are Laggards

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were strong in New York at noon, with oils still leading the market and with Mexican Petroleum the foremost issue in this group, advancing gains ranged from fractions to more than four points. The greatest enhancement were made by Mexican Petroleum and Cruchie.

Among other notably strong issues were International Corporation, American Woolen common, Houston, Royal Dutch, Stromberg, Texas Coal & Oil, Chandler, Studebaker and Sears Roebuck.

The market was very active, first hour transactions totaling 350,000 shares. Call money opened at 6½ per cent. Foreign exchange rates were higher, demand sterling opening at $3.83.

OILS LED THE RISE.

The market had a strong and active opening, with oils leading the advance. Coppers, motors and tobaccos were a little irregular, although most of them made early gains. Steels showed immediate improvement. Profit taking in some issues figured in the first hour movement but was compared in the aggregate. There was a continuous ascent in others. By the end of an hour the majority of issues showed initial opening prices, motors showing exceptional strength. Rails were the laggards among coppers, selling at a new high for the year, as did Chino and American Woolen common. Oils were benefitted by another advance in the price of Pennsylvania crude oil. Mexican Petroleum, Pan American, Houston and Royal Dutch were the strongest issues in this group, being priced materially went up, but their gains were relatively less. Tobaccos reached a high level at once, General Asphalt was an active an usual. Pittsburgh Steel was among the leaders for months. Rails lagged a little in the advance, Pennsylvania & Ohio making the best and leading the poorest showing.

SELLING MORE MOTORS.

The marked increase in automobile sales in March, as compared with February, and the revival of car manufacturing in a number of centres are said to have created a demand for motor securities. Buying of Studebaker, which was the market leader for several days, was accompanied by rumors that Durant interests were accumulating the stock. Oils benefitted by reports of increased consumption of petroleum products and a hardening of prices for the latter. Steels were rather weak. Price cutting in that industry has not stimulated demand for the product to any extent as yet. But it is still believed that it will greatly benefit all other industries within a short time and that steel plants will be busy before the end of the year. Some of the closed mills are reopening already. In fact, it is reported that business in general is now on the up. Stocks of all kinds of goods have been reduced and when every surplus is wiped out there will be a demand which will make industrial towns hum with activity. There is every hoping on increasing scale and retail authorities state that price cutting has brought about a demand so that estimated the retail shoe trade, taking the country as a whole, is about 75 per cent. of normal.

Wall Street Briefs

GOLD MAY EASE MONEY PINCH

By BROADAY WALL

Registered U. S. Patent Office.

New York, April 25.—With gold flowing into the United States from all parts of the world, financial interests are inclined to look for easier money in the volume of funds available for business. Experience has shown that large gold imports are usually followed by increase of inflation of credit and this is one of the reasons why easier conditions in the money market are expected in the near future.

While it is true that some large corporations continue to feel the pinch of hard times and are experiencing difficulty in extending loans, evidence accumulates daily that bank loans are steadily being liquidated.

This is particularly true of the motor industry. Substantial improvement in the automobile business is evidenced by the expansion in shipments. Ford is expected to make shipments of about 100,000 cars this month. Studebaker will also make large shipments. Chevrolet is breaking all records for output.

Perhaps the most important undertaking this week will be the launching of the $250,000,000 joint issue of six and one-half per cent. collateral trust bonds by the Northern Pacific and Great Northern railroads to take up $215,000,000 of Northern Pacific-Great Northern joint four per cent. bonds which mature July 1, 1921. An arrangements have been made for a formal offering of the securities at 96½ to investors all over the country.

With the exception of the Liberty and Victory loans no such comprehensive plans have ever been worked out for a bond issue as in this instance. More than fifty per cent of the investment and brokerage houses in the financial district have circularized their clients on this issue. Expressions of confidence in the successful sale of the bonds are heard on all sides.

Confidence is expressed in many quarters that the administration will soon announce some plan for the funding of the $2,500,000,000 United States certificates of indebtedness outstanding. Such a step, according to banking interests, would do much to relieve the credit strain.

Copper Export Movement

In two days of last week export shipments of copper from New York aggregated 11,812,000 pounds, and for the month up to April 23 exports from that port aggregated 28,630,600 pounds. The red metal was bought by Germany, England, France, Belgium, Holland and Spain.

COAL CRISIS HURTS MARKET IN LONDON

London, April 25.—The coal crisis continued to act as a wet blanket on the stock markets the past week, preventing the reduction of the bank rate from seven to six per cent. as well as any marked increase in business.

Oil shares were in the limelight. It is certain that there will be a big increase in the price of petrol as a result of the weakening of British coal productivity.

Rubber stocks are out of fashion, but industrials are holding ground. Much attention is being paid to the textile manufacturing concerns. The English Electric, Metropolitan, Vickers and General Electric and allied issues the shares wanted. Chinese engineering stocks were in for a big rise; these shares being regarded as most promising.

Silver Is Cheaper

Although the government must pay at least $1 an ounce under the Pittman act for silver produced in this country, the domestic price dropped a quarter of a cent an ounce on Saturday, the quotation being 59¾ cents. It is said in explanation that this is due to the order that all silver bought under that act must hereafter be delivered at the Denver mint, before the coinage of silver dollars has been resumed. This increases delivery costs.

Raw Wool Market Quiet

Dullness in the raw wool market is attributed to cloth manufacturers of having stocked up in order to a desire to wait until the effect of an emergency tariff can be judged. It is reported that on April 21 931 wool manufacturing concerns had 548,790 machines running against 1,000,000 while 738,400 were idle. In regard to worsted operations, 1,846,640 spindles were active and 814,240 were idle.

Sugar Selling Slowly

Cuban producers are finding it hard to sell raw sugar at present, exports from the island totaling but 190,784 tons up to April 16 as compared with 1,858,045 for the corresponding period last year. Such an authority as W. A. Himely says: The exports are so much smaller than expected that in some of the ports anxiety is felt lest the warehouses be filled up and be obliged to refuse to accept any more. Havana has only room for 120,000 bags more and Matanzas for 100,000."

Roads to Cut Costs

Railroad managers are sending every effort to reduce operating costs and expect to make a saving of at least $500,000 in the bill for the last eight months of 1921. Coal contracts expired on April 1. They also figure that July 1 relief from national agreements relating to wages and working conditions will enable them to reduce the payroll about $260,000,000 in the last half of this year.

Meat Shipments Increase

Meat shipments from Chicago continue to increase. For the week they totaled 41,107,000 pounds, against 21,461,000 for the corresponding period of last year.

Meat in Cold Storage

On April 1 there were in cold storage in this country 1,338,116,000 pounds of meat and lard, or 204,000,000 pounds less than a year ago.

Wool Shipments From Boston

Wool shipments from Boston from January 1 to April 20, inclusive, totaled 42,787,000 pounds as compared with 81,787,400 for the corresponding 1920 period, while receipts were 167,951,292 against 199,859,156 pounds.

THREE TRIPS FOR GREEN GOLFERS

Manager Frost Announces Dates of Dartmouth Team; Play Harvard Here

Hanover, N. H., April 25.—The 1921 schedule of the Dartmouth golf team, as given out by Manager O. C. Frost, consists of matches with Columbia at New York, Penn at Philadelphia, Amherst at Holyoke, Harvard at Boston, M. I. T. at Springfield, Princeton at New York, Yale here at New Haven, Williams at Greenfield and the Intercollegiate at Greenwich, Ct.

The first trip, which starts May 6, includes the first four games on the schedule.

The second trip starts May 21, and includes the next four games. The intercollegiate, June 11, and Dartmouth, 13, will be the sole object of the third trip.

SCHOOL SPORTS

By FRED C. LANE.

All scheduled games in the Suburban League that were to have been played Saturday will be played off today. There is a rule in vogue in this league that no team will play two consecutive days, with the same number of days. As Wednesday is down for its usual number of mid-week games, the only possible chance to straighten out the schedule.

Cambridge Latin at Everett, Somerville at Brookline, Malden at Newton and Arlington at Lynn are the scheduled games of the Suburban League for today.

Cambridge Latin, leaders of the league, should have no easy time with any of their three opponents, playing Everett, Medford and Malden, three last place teams. May I will find them encountering some real opposition when they take on the much improved Latin team at their own home grounds.

Owing to the condition of the playing grounds of the North Shore League it is doubtful if the game halted Saturday by J. Pluvius will be run off today. Children and fowl will play today at Carter Street Playground.

* * *

Stoneham High School, under the direction of Frank Silva, has been making big strides in rounding into a first-class nine. Silva has always been extinct for five years at this institution, but returned to the fold for time this season. Conditions of this kind make it a mere difficult task for a coach to whip a team into shape on a bunch of green men. This is what Coach Silva has done, and from the showing made in practice by these boys has done it well.

* * *

Clarke, a centre fielder; Reynolds, first base, and Hamill, shortstop, are the leading candidates up to eligible to make any strong high school team. All are veterans in addition to being good fielders.

Coach Cushing of Chelsea High has Sullivan and Rubin doing the pitching for the team, and they ought to finish up in the first division of the North Shore League.

The finishing touches will be put on today, when Lynn and Friday Tech start in competing in the Penn carnival Friday, go through their final workouts at Lynn. Each team in the meet has four fast men that should come home with one of the coveted prizes in gold and Bill McFarland, Mannix and Herliney.

* * *

Dartmouth College is the choice of Paul Herlihey, Jack Aspanian, Louis Tsoules and Bill Burns, for the all star athletes at Lynn Classical. Each has specialized in one or more lines of sport which will make them exceptionally valuable to Dartmouth.

* * *

It is the plan of Trainer George Connors of Exeter to work his relay team in both the one-mile preparatory school championships and the medley relay event at the Penn relay carnival Friday and Saturday. As each event is run on a separate day, the boys will not be wearied by the one and other strain.

* * *

Up to date, it hasn't been definitely stated just how the boys will run, but Exeter will probably run the first mile, Lundell the 220, Moring the 440 and Norton the 880 in the medley races.

BARTFIELD AND ROBSON IN BATTLE AT THE ARENA TONIGHT

DOYLE AND LOUGHLIN IN TILT

Shubert Clashes With Baird in Third Number on Baldwin A. A. Card

Baldwin A. A. Selections

Soldier Bartfield to beat Tommy Robson. Paul Doyle to beat K. O. Loughlin. Al Shubert to beat Earl Baird. Louis Lynch to beat Willie Coogan.

Fans of fistiana got off to an early start th s week for as many of them as the Boston Arena will hold are expected to be crowded into that auditorium tonight for the opening show of the Baldwin A. A., which is to offer three real classy all-star ten-round contests as its attraction.

For its greatest entioer, the club will have a return meeting of those slugging middleweights, Soldier Bartfield of New York and Tommy Robson of Malden, topping the bill. Not far behind that match for class will be the meeting of K. O. Loughlin of Philadelphia and Paul Doyle as the runner-up bout of the night, and just before they appear on the scene, Al Shubert, New England featherweight champion, tackles Earl Baird of Seattle, every bit as much of a spirited spit-fire as Shubert is.

Card Gives Promise of Busy Times

The program shapes up as one sure to interest everybody who attends. The first battle of Robson and Bartfield proved to be the real feature of a show recently seen at the Arena and it was a battle such as won't be forgotten for a while. From the sound of the first bell to the final one they continued at a pace that was amazing. Neither ever let up. They vied with each other in starting new rallies.

The crowd cheered as one seldom does all during the battle and, at its conclusion, roared mightily in approval. Barfield won the decision, but Robson got as much glory out of the mill as did Barfield. There is a chance that this second meeting will be even more thrilling, for Robson avers he will even scores with Bartfield this time.

Many a fan is of the opinion the Shubert-Baird bout will prove the best of the show. It will have to be a corker if it is to exceed the top tilt or the affair which Doyle and Loughlin are sure to present.

Baird Made Big Hit Boxing as Amateur

Loughlin showed unusual punching power here a couple of months ago which made the going too tough for Tommy McFarland. Doyle seems to thrive on just such matches as these, where he is opposed by a man who will make him work his hardest. Paul is anxious to figure in many of our Summer shows, so has planned to do a little more than Loughlin, no matter how much that worthy does.

Baird, a national amateur winner here in 1917, made a wonderful impression in New York the night of the Wilson-O'Dowd fight and the hundreds of Boston fans who saw him that night feel he will be just the boy to handle the bristling New Bedfordite.

The office of the club at 218 Washington street will be kept open today until 9 o'clock and thereafter tickets will have to be obtained at the box office at the Arena. Doors will be opened at seven o'clock.

GEORGIA TECH MEMORIAL TO FOOTBALL MARTYR

Athens, Ga., April 25.—One of the most dramatic incidents in the history of American football will be commemorated when the memorial to Von Gammon, famous Georgia quarterback of the late '90s, is unveiled on the campus of the University of Georgia at Athens this commencement.

So strong was the feeling against football in the South after Von Gammon was fatally injured in a contest with Virginia at Brisbane Park in 1897 that the future of the game was seriously threatened.

BRAVES BEATEN ONCE MORE

Dodgers Display Plenty of Punching Power at Brooklyn

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 25.—Those who saw the Braves lose the first game of the season to the Brooklyn Dodgers, then wipe up the earth with the Dodgers in their next four games, and also watched the Braves lose three straight to the Dodgers in Brooklyn in the series just ended, saw a mixt as tonishing reversal of baseball luck and form.

After the first game of the season everything the Braves attempted went through and everything the Dodgers tried failed miserably. The Braves played better ball than the Dodgers and out hit the Brooklyn lites. Finally, the Braves had all the luck. In the series which was concluded by a 12 to 5 defeat for the Braves exactly the reverse of the early series was to be found. The Dodger pitchers outpitched those of the Braves. The Dodgers outfielded the Braves and the Dodgers had all the luck.

Braves' Teamwork Better Than Dodgers

In only one respect were the eight games which the two teams have evenly divided in comparison. That was in the batter tournaments, known by the Braves in the field. Although the Braves have a new shortstop in Barbare and Sunday had a new second baseman in Fred Nicholson, and have a new right fielder in Hill Southworth, the Braves have played better defensive ball generally, and mentally that have the Dodgers.

The home run by Dave Fillingim in the second inning, and that by Cruise in the eighth with Nicholson on first, were the only bright spots for the Braves after the first inning. Both were tremendous knocks over the right field fence.

Leon Cadore was knocked out of the Braves in the first inning for the first time in his career, making three times the Braves had chased him to the showers.

SHARKEY SURE HE WILL WIN FROM BENNY COSTER

New York, April 25.—Jack Sharkey, the Italian battalionwelght, has announced that he will surely outlast Benny Coster in their battle tomorrow night at the Pioneer Sporting Club, and that he is confident he will clinch his victory by a knockout if such is possible for he wants to get back in the ring with Jack Dempsey as soon as he can.

Nine hockey men defeat at the hands of Hop Moore he has been slumming for a return match and if he can get it he will be in the position to demand another fight, that defeat having taught him much, and he has been training faithfully for the match. A decisive victory over Moore would put Sharkey back in favor with the public.

BELMONT TERMINAL READY TO ENTERTAIN JUMPERS

New York, April 25.—There is every likelihood that the long desired need as a suitable schooling ground for steeplechasers will be filled at Belmont Park Terminal, that portion recently appointed steeplechase course of the United Hunts arrangements are making for the proper preparation of jumpers at that track.

The Greatness of Ruth

The man who does the thing you expect him to do is a satisfying man.

You pay your money to see Babe Ruth knock home-runs. Whereupon Babe knocks 'em—towering lifts over the walls, or sharp shots into the bleachers.

Other men are hitting home-runs this year. Other men have hit home-runs in other years. But their home-runs are infrequent, and you do not pay your money with the thought that they will hit home-runs.

They MAY. You feel that Ruth WILL. And Ruth DOES.

Hitting home-runs is his specialty.

Even when Ruth fails to knock a home-run your disappointment is smothered by the mighty effort he puts behind each attempt. He swings with all the power in his bulky body, and when he misses the ball he is staggering like a horse suddenly brought up at the end of a tether.

Employers would gladly pay big money to get men as satisfying at Ruth, men who deliver, or in failing to deliver put sufficient power behind their effort to show the weight of their intention.

Employers know that it is no more possible for a man to deliver every time than it is for Ruth to hit a home-run every time.

But a fair portion of delivery, and the same constant and terrific effort that Ruth puts into his efforts cannot fail to make a man satisfying to any employer. D. R.

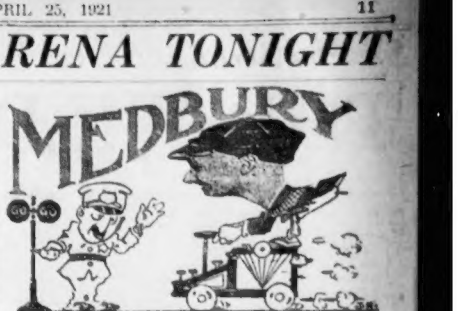
MEDBURY



Ancestors are things that people love as soon as they get enough money to afford them.

Rich people are not only able to have their ancestors looked up but they are able to have them hooked up.

A man walks until an ancestor had been dead a few hundred years before he claims relationship.

If some of the ancestors could come back today they'd have a lot of relatives to visit.

A wealthy woman had her family tree looked up and found that one of her ancestors was hanged in a branch of it.

It's all right to have a family tree if it isn't shaky.

Some people today live ON their family trees, while their ancestors lived IN them.

They make more fuss over one in a family tree than some lumber men make over a whole forest.

Some people think they have a family tree because one of their ancestors happened to have a wooden leg.

Napoleon is the favorite ancestor for many more aristocrats than he ever rode ladder.

Captain John Smith also has a lot of descendants. The telephone book is full of his relatives.

George Washington has six sheets, but only those who own cherries claims relationship.

Nobody today has an ancestor who didn't come over in the country on the Mayflower. According to the descendants, the Mayflower had so many passengers that a canard liner was the size of their baggage alone.

Every ancestor came over first class. The Mayflower didn't carry any steerage passengers.

Some people are ever canned beans just because their ancestors happened to land in Boston.

Ancestors are all right, but a rich man in poor health is a maple 194 letter.

A'S AT FENWAY PARK TODAY

Lowly Mackmen Open Four-Game Series With Sox; Jones on Mound Against Harris

Cornelius MacGillicuddy, otherwise known as Connie Mack, led his lowly Athletics onto Fenway Park to start a series with the Red Sox today. The Mackerels are supposed to be much stronger this season than they have been for several years, but they still are entombed in the cellar, and do not take much heating.

Hugh Duffy hasn't been overpleased by the vacation the weather here wished on his athletes, as the club needed work when it returned from the South. But he's optimistic just the same, and figures Harris is six feet five, or something like that—a bird who cannot hit or field, but who can put plenty on the baseball. Against a smart team like the natives, he's likely to be bunted out of the country, but he's just about as good as anything the canny Mack is willing to pay to pitch for him.

The A's remain here for four games and the Yanks follow for the same dose. The end of the week is sure to be successful, as Babe Ruth can fill the orchard to the fences by just stepping out into the field.

Red Sox Here for Two More Series

The Sox play two series, the present one with the A's and another with the Yankees, before hitting the trails for the first swing around the western end of the circuit. Much depends on the next few starts, because victory, even over the Mackmen, will assure the team popular support. Defeat will mean a rather slim season at the Fenway.

Samuel Jones, who has been nominated to open all series for the Sox, was sent out after today's battle, with Harris opposing him. Harris is six feet five, or something like that—a bird who cannot hit or field, but who can put plenty on the baseball. Against a smart team like the natives, he's likely to be bunted out of the country, but he's just about as good as anything the canny Mack is willing to pay to pitch for him.

The A's remain here for four games and the Yanks follow for the same dose. The end of the week is sure to be successful, as Babe Ruth can fill the orchard to the fences by just stepping out into the field.

THE BOXING HEARING

Pete Herman and Young Montreal Again Sporting Writers Still Have Rights Secrecy and Our Ring Officials Baldwin A. A. Makes Bow Tonight

By JACK CONWAY

The merits of the decision at the recent bout between Pete Herman and Young Montreal will be discussed at a public hearing at the offices of the Boxing Commissioners at the State House today. The Boxing Commission is to be commended for taking such prompt action on this important matter.

The charge was made in sporting circles following the contest that the bout was "in the bag"; in other words, that Montreal was given protection which assured him of victory. Such a serious charge could not well be passed over lightly by the Boxing Commission. Lewis E. Sullivan and William T. McDermott, judges at the contest, are also eager to have all the facts connected with the contest made public.

A number of witnesses have been summoned to appear before the Boxing Commission. It is possible that persons with valuable evidence in regard to the contest are unknown to the Boxing Commission and so could not be summoned. If there are any such persons, they should appear at today's hearing. What they know may be of interest to those persons who desire to have the status of the Herman-Montreal bout settled.

We do not believe that the hearing is a whitewashing party. If there was anything in connection with the Herman-Montreal bout which was not proper, we do not doubt but that Messrs. Foote, Buckley and Barrett will act against the guilty party or parties. Of course if the Boxing Commission should find that everything was conducted in a perfectly proper manner, the public will be glad to receive such an announcement. The officials connected with the contest are entitled to be vindicated from public scandal if they have done no wrong.

The question of whether the decision was a good or bad one is another story again. This writer believes the verdict was a very poor one. Fortunately it is not a criminal offense for a sporting writer to disagree with the reasonings of referees, judges, umpires and other individuals connected with the various branches of sports. When it becomes unlawful for a sporting writer to give what he considers a truthful opinion, we shall cease to be a sporting writer.

With the Boxing Commission investigating the Herman-Montreal bout, it is an opportune moment to make another suggestion in regard to judges. We recently stated that it would be a good plan to reduce the number of judges, to pick fifteen to twenty experienced officials who could perform either as judges or referees and to give them enough work at a fee considerably more than $5 a night. We now respectfully suggest that the verdicts rendered by judges and referees be made public. Under such a system the announcer would state for whom the judges decided, naming them. In the event of a disagreement, the fans would know for which boxer each judge voted and he would then be informed as to the decision of the referee. There is no necessity for any secrecy in connection with a boxing match.

Despite all the talk about boxing hearings and such things, the Baldwin A. A. will begin operations tonight. Matchmaker Roy Green has arranged one of the best fighting cards that he has offered to Boston and New England fans this year. Soldier Bartfield and Tommy Robson, who recently engaged in a thrilling battle at the Boston Arena, will clash in the feature bout. Paul Doyle and K. O. Loughlin, two star welterweights, will meet in another ten-round match. Al Shubert and Earl Baird, brilliant featherweights, complete the program. This show should help to re-establish the boxing game in Boston.

Boston College and Maine were the contestants in today's diamond clash at the University Heights. The B. C. nine was robbed of a scheduled contest Saturday by adverse weather, and the players were eager to get into action again.

Maine looked fairly smooth, and evidently had improved quite a bit since Patriots' Day, when the invading Stute dropped a game to Coach Jewett, the Maine twirler, did some classy work, however, when he was sent in during that encounter, and was expected to give Urban's nine plenty of trouble.

THINKS WELL OF ROCKY KANSAS

By JAMES J. CORBETT.

Many ring experts suddenly have come to the conclusion that Rocky Kansas, the rugged, tearing Buffalo Italian, is the one lightweight now in harness who can force Benny Leonard to extend himself. Others think that if the pair ever clash the title will change hands.

Kansas has a style of fighting which is not the usual Leonard opponent has to his opinion. Kansas is a fighting fool at in-fighting, and he never stops crashing until one man or the other is down for the full count. Kansas has a punch that is not the type of aggression Leonard uses much.

Kansas has been a terror of late outsiders in the last few years. In addition to Welsh, he has fought Johnny Dundee, Johnny Kilbane and Frankie Callahan. And also he won ten rounds no decision some years ago from Leonard.

Wolf Larsen Brings His Wallop Into Pro Ring

By DAMON RUNYON.

If you are an amateur hating fan you may recall, in the recent tournaments hereabouts, one Magnus Larsen. If not, a description may refresh your memory.

Short, pudgy, red-headed, open-faced, wallowed, serious, with a horrendous scowl.

That's the lad.

Mind you, he is not to be known as a Wolf Larsen, after Jack London's great character in "The Sea Wolf," is a heavyweight in the novice ranks he represented the Norwegian-American A. A. and he was the class of the heavyweight class in those tournaments like water through a tin horn. Larsen was a terror in the amateur ranks. When he would crash through the ropes in most any ring stool or general, he would rush those at once, and everybody would get ready to duck.

Larsen so showing on at the tournaments always had the appearance of having been through a mill. From the drivers seat of an ice wagon. There was that about him which so impressed the fans that probably 75 per cent of the ringsiders were rooting for him.

"As hard to fight," he would say. "You can't get him to go down, and while everybody was feeling decidedly about him he would haul off and crack some one with.

Usually Does Trick With Body Punch

Surely you must remember Larsen now.

Half a dozen managers of professional fighters got very much excited about Larsen after the novice ranks. He usually dropped his man with a body punch, and stood both coasts to see a rare that they always attract attention.

Various offers were made to the Red Viking in turn pro, but he declined them all. He said he wanted to go through the rest of his amateur tournament first, and then he would listen to ideas on the subject of making his first ring entrance.

The big tournament over with Magnus Larsen announced that he had been decided to live everybody in the world at least as many persons in the world as possible. He has signed up with Tom O'Rourke, the veteran manager of fighters, and his schooling has already commenced.

Tom used to attend the amateur tournaments religiously. He was credited with Mad Avery as anyone else. In fact, Tom and the writer used to hold down the "Press" box by a single seat in the balls on the merits of the crude Norwegian with the fearful body punch.

Tom writes that he has turned Magnus over to Dan Hickey for instruction. It is Tom who changes Magnus's name to "Wolf" by a simple twist of the typewriter. Tom thinks it sounds better than Magnus. Introducing A man as "Wolf" gives him a slight edge

Laughing Hyenas Wept as Slam Hit Someone

By "BUGS" BAER.

To whom it doesn't concern—Know ye, by these goops, that my protege Slamming Tompkins, knocked Gink Fowler for a row of debris. Slam was the originator of the now famous one, two slug. He thumped to waits music. One, two meant that he took two to give one. He crashed Gink so hard that he knocked him back on his mother's lap.

Yours until the laughing hyenas cry, BILLY BARLOW.
305 Norton avenue, Scranton, Pa.

There is no record of Slamming Tompkins having slammed anything in Roughtown but a door. But one thing we slip to him. He was a great salesman. He could sell alarm clocks in graveyards. He sold his way into a fistic match with Roughtown's champion. He spoke that most difficult language, Checko-Dodgia. That means dodging a check. When the waiter held the official inquest at the end of the meal, Slam was never caught with the guilty tip.

He got away with it until he pattered into Roughtown. He ran up against a wire-whiskered hash messenger, who had been dealing off the arm for many a flapjooted year. Slam figured him for a rubber collar pollisher, and proceeded to eat himself to a new set of double chins.

The waiter was none other than The Glutt, who was loitering around Roughtown waiting for Gink Fowler to come down out of a tree.

Although not generally known, the Champ of Roughtown was never happy on the ground. His home was in the trapeze. The Glutt didn't fall—Gink climbed into a higher tree.

Just when it seemed it was a case for the Broad A that Tompkins was slipping him. He had been educated in a Chinese laundry. No checkee, no washee, was his motto. And he had that slogan woven on both sides of his visiting cards.

He took one loose-leaf bopp at Tompkins, and made him think he was an errand boy on the wrong errand. Tompkins left town feet first. The news got into the papers and The Glutt almost got a match with Gink.

CHAPTER I.

FRANCIS MANNERS woke up one morning with the feeling that he was a long way from home, and that he had been away a long time, and that he really ought to stay away any longer. "Ought" is a strong feeling, and there was no reason which he knew of to justify it. He had gone to bed with the feeling that he could not finish his work in California before the middle of April, and he had wasted the next morning in a blustery mist near the end of February—with the feeling that he ought to go home at once.

This, however, was impracticable. In order to pay his most pressing obligations he had undertaken in a moment (which he now felt to have been a dark one) to fresco the dining-room walls of, Mrs. Cooper Appleyard's new house, and he had still to make the preliminary sketch, for the end with the two doors. And this sketch, of course, had to be made among the surroundings from which it was to draw its inspiration. Mrs. Cooper Appleyard's new house was to be Californian inside and out.

An Inward Voice

With the though that he could perhaps get the sketch finished by April Fool's Day, he turned on the cold water in his bathtub and began to shave. While he was shaving he told himself that he really ought to go home at once.

The inside of his bathroom was one sheet of looking-glass; and when he had finished his right cheek he consulted this to see if he was developing a stomach. His wife had once told him laughingly that she would never forgive him if he did and, as she had a laughing way of saying things that she really meant, sooner than go back to her looking as if he had swallowed a melon, Manners would have taken drastic measures. He observed with satisfaction that his contures were still those of a young man, and that the gray hairs above his temples were still so few as to be enumerable.

He foamened the lather on the left side of his face and finished shaving. Then he got into the very cool water which he had been drawing, and sat down with a gasp of real pain. He had the idea that disagreeable things were good for him, but there was little danger that he would ever become perfect through overindulgence in them. He preferred that impulsively which distinguishes those who habitually pursue the disagreeable—agreeable foods, drinks, surroundings, temperatures, people.

Not a Care

If there had been nothing agreeable about cold baths he would have taken them not. But the real pleasure of getting out of one more than made up for the pain of getting in. And, passing from tubs to triumphs, from the pleasures of his limbs to those of the soul, wiser men than Francis Manners have agreed that the way to heaven lies through purgatory.

During a few moments of violent friction he hadn't a care in the world; and then as he stood on one foot, contemplating the two ways or backward or forward to keep his balance) and drawing a black silk sock over the other, his serenity was once more disturbed by the feeling that he really ought to go home.

He was subject to sudden intuitions, especially where his wife and daughter were concerned. That more often than not these turned out to be groundless did not alter his faith in them, or his wife's dread of them. In the past her husband's intuitions had more than once precipitated those difficult situations for which her own impulses had been responsible.

At the moment, so far as Francis Manners knew, all was serene between them. That is to say, as serene as things ever could be. For the husband had long since abandoned any real hope of that perfect marital serenity for which he had given the best that was in him to give, and to which he might have been thought, because of his great faithfulness in loving, to have acquired a little that was without law. He was forty years old, but he could look his wife in the eyes and say truthfully: "My darling, I have loved you for almost a generation."

Francis Manners, returning home unexpectedly, goes into his wife's room, only to find that her love has changed to indifference

A Deep-Seated Love

The love which seemed as definite a part of Francis Manners' nature as his feeling for form and color was a victorious love. It had triumphed over such failures toward it as would have doomed a lesser love to an early death and caused it perhaps to turn, thereafter, in its grave.

Of course he loved his wife in this way because he couldn't help it. He couldn't help it any more than he could help the shape of his ears; but he was human enough to take the kind of pride in it which should more definitely have been reserved for those accomplishments for which he was more or less responsible. To be proud of his eye for color would have been childish, for he had been born with it; to have been proud of the technique which enabled him to make good use of color would have been sensible. He was proud of neither.

He was proud only of that faithfulness in loving which had cost him no effort whatsoever; and yet he didn't know when he should be back. Eva sighed wearily. She supposed that last night would make more trouble between Peter and Kitty. She knew that Peter had been seething with rage and jealousy all the evening.

The rooms seemed very quiet without Philip. After lunch she went into the library and looked around with resolute eyes.

Peter came in while she was wandering round Philip's room. He looked rather pale and constrained. He avoided his sister's eyes.

He had had lunch, he said—with Kitty, he added, with a note of defiance.

Eva said nothing, and suddenly he broke out:

"What on earth possessed Philip last night? If I didn't know I should have thought he had been drinking."

His sister's cheeks flamed.

"What do you mean?" she asked quietly.

He began to bluster. He looked very like his father at that moment.

"What do I mean! You know very well what I mean! The way he treated Kitty—he—made things abominable for her! What could she do? I—I was angry with her this morning, but I can see now that it was not really her fault. She explained the whole thing to me."

Eva's lips curled bitterly.

"What did she explain?" she asked.

"Why—all the tomfoolery that went on," he said roughly. "I wouldn't have believed it of Philip—it . . . It was an insult to you besides being—being almost embarrassing for Kitty. I suppose I ought to have said something at the time, but with you there . . ."

Eva laughed.

"You need not trouble about me, my dear," she said. "Say what you like to Philip—I promise not to object or to interfere."

He stared at her.

"What—what the deuce is the matter with you two?" he asked at last in bewilderment.

Shrugged Her Shoulder

She shrugged her shoulders.

"Matter! Nothing! We've only agreed to go our own and separate ways. It seems to me that most married people come to it sooner or later. Perhaps we've come a little sooner than most. . . ."

"But . . . but you were so keen on him! I know you were long before—before . . ." He broke off in dismay. "Weren't you, Bonnie?" he asked.

She could not meet his eyes.

"I thought I was—put it that way," she said as lightly as she could. "We all make mistakes. I only hope you'll profit by mine, Peter, dear——"

His laughed rather self-consciously.

Husband's Battle to Keep Love of Fascinating But Fickle Wife shake the stability of the feeling with which he had waked.

Of course, if Diana was in a real difficulty of any kind she would telegraph him to come home. She would telegraph him, for instance, if their little daughter were seriously ill. But if, on the other hand, she was only in a half-difficulty she would not telegraph.

Why in Town?

He read over half a dozen of her short letters, selected at random and covering the whole period of their three months' separation. And he noted that her last letter of all, the one that he had received the day before, was dated Sunday. In this fact there was, of course, nothing disturbing. What disturbed him was the knowledge that the letter had been written in town and not in the country.

He now gathered all her letters together and went through them with a view to finding out when they had been written and where. And although a number were not dated at all, it was conclusively shown that a large majority, especially during the last two months, had been written in town. Three of these were dated Sunday.

It had been agred between them that when he had to be away on business she would manage, much as the city amused her, to spend most of the week looking after their small daughter "Tam" in the country.

They shared the theory that one of them ought almost always to be with Tam. They were firmly determined that Tam should not grow up spoiled and selfish, and if left too much to the indulgence of Diana's mother, Mrs. Langham, who lived with them, some such corruption of a fine little character was to be feared.

Diana, then, was neglecting Tam. Of course he ought to go home! Talk of intuition! But it was no thought of the neglected Tam, wrapped about his heart though she was, that made him suddenly experience a kind of anxious excitement. At the back of all his thoughts there was always the vague dread of what Diana might suddenly feel that she must do next.

In the last analysis, he sometimes thought, Diana's wishes and inclinations were her sole means of judging what was right and what was wrong. In this, of course, he did her injustice. The truth was that Diana's ochre of right and wrong did not always control her conduct.

Up to What Now?

What was Diana up to now?

He would go home for a few days, just long enough to find out what was wrong, and to make it right if he could. Then he would come back to California and peacefully finish the sketches for Mrs. Appleyard's dining room. The expense of the trip to a man who was trying very hard to be economical himself so that another might spend bothered him a little.

It would be hard to explain to Diana his sudden return to New York; especially it would be hard if her reasons for being so much away from Tam were merely the usual reasons; love of people, love of excitement, and a restless energy which only bodily activity could calm.

He could not in the present instance help suspecting that there must be a more specific reason. He rather thought that she must have taken a sudden fancy to some new "crowd" (almost a habit of hers), who in return (a habit of theirs) had taken an immense fancy to her.

In such cases one party leads to another so naturally ad pleasantly that all sense of time and proportion is easily lost sight of.

Diana, then, was simply having a mad, glad time. He could visualize her. When she was excited and in high spirits there was no prettier woman in New York. His heart beat more quickly at the thought. But even the most amusing crowds in New York usually leave the city to its dull fate on Sunday; and here was Diana spending a good many of her Sundays in town!

"The Wild Goose" will be continued tomorrow, in which instalment Frederick Manners has an interesting talk on the train with a duck hunter.

When a Girl Marries

By Ann Lisle.

Copyright, 1921, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

WAS I going to protest that I wasn't in charge of Jim's affairs, but was on my way to consult Mabel Storrs, who was in charge? Or was I going to protest that Jim was in town and risk the possibility that Mrs. Varden would learn the truth and try to ferret out the reason for my lie? I completed my sentence by another, "I'm not likely to attract many clients if I keep such shocking hours."

Mrs. Varden laid her hand on my arm and gave me a push steered in malice.

"Run along, dear," she gushed. "If do hope you manage your husband's affairs as—discreetly as you do your own."

With a good-by, flavored with a shudder of distaste, I hurried away.

No Appetite.

By the time I got to the street I noticed a clock pointing to quarter past 9. My appetite for breakfast was gone. Moreover, I hadn't any time to waste on the mere process of eating, for, unless I made the greatest haste, I wouldn't get to Jim's office much ahead of the bustle and flurry of the market's 10 o'clock opening.

I hailed a taxicab and requested the driver to make all possible speed. So he turned into a short cut of speed, unfamiliar twisting streets. We spun along madly for five minutes and then were held back by traffic surging across our way. As I sat looking about, idly I noticed a familiar looking car crossing the side street in front of me.

After a second I chuckled to myself for calling the car "familiar looking." No wonder. I'd been driving about in it all the day before. It was Tony's limousine with Lyons at the wheel. But who was the queer-looking man hunched up on the seat next to Lyons with his plaid cap pulled down over queer cut-spreading of the ears?

It wasn't until we drew up at the door of the building where Jim's office is located that I realized why the man with Lyons had attracted my attention.

I had seen him yesterday, lounging back against the wall of Dad Lee's hotel. Then Lyons had made obvious efforts to avoid the skulking figure. Why was he driving him today along a narorw side street in a drab backwater of the city?

I wondered if I ought to speak to Lyons about this or if I'd make him miserable and ill at ease by suggesting that I thought he ought to be kept under surveillance.

Jerking the door open I sailed into Jim's offices and started to cross the anteroom toward the big open space on the right where the office workers are located. As I got to the swinging opening in the mahogany rail, a crisp young voice interrupted me and a freckled, impudent young face peered around at me, reinforcing the assertion.

"Can't go in there, lady. Gotta tell me your business and I'll getta line on who ya wanta see."

"I am Mrs. Harrison," I said gently. "This is my husband's office."

"Please, lady," he said, "orders is orders. I gotta ask Her. Maybe I can take you to Herself. C'mon."

Then with amazing agility he sprang around the desk, stumbled through the opening in the rail and led me straight to the door of Jim's office. Before I could recover from my puzzled astonishment he flung open the door with a funny little air of gallantry and announced:

"Lady who says she's Mrs. Harrison."

In Jim's chair, at Jim's desk, sat a woman. She was beuding over some papers. At the sound of the boyish voice she looked up. I caught a glimpse of a face of rather stern and austere beauty, warming under a caressing smile. It flashed across her face and was gone as the door closed and she rose with quiet composure to greet me.

"Miss Storrs, of course!" I said as I held out a hand which she gripped for a quick second.

Waved to Chair

Then, waving me to a chair—the client's chair—she resumed her place at my husband's desk saying in a low voice, with just the suggestion of a drawl:

"I am Miss Storrs. What may I have the pleasure of doing for you, Mrs. Harrison?"

For a second we measured each other. She at my husband's desk, I in the chair where outsiders—clients—were supposed to sit.

The woman in Jim's chair was young. Neal hadn't told me that. His description—the goddess of purity, had suggested to the cadable middle age. She was beautiful, too. Smooth brown hair ripples away from a broad, fair forehead. A full nose was chiselled between dark brows, which tapered smoothly beyond the corners of wide, steady gray eyes.

Miss Storrs had a clear Greek type of beauty. Placid like Juno or Ceres, but with full, pouting lips, the upper of which protruded a bit over white, even teeth. Her mouth was the most human note in her beautiful, but unrevealing, face.

"Miss Storrs, I came to discuss a business matter with you," I began, stuffing toward the need for getting things about the check.

The telephone on Jim's desk interrupted. With a brief word of apology, Miss Storrs took down the receiver with an air of custom that galled me.

FOR LOVE

An Absorbing Romance
By Ruby M. Ayres

PART III—Continued

WHEN Kitty had gone she followed the two men back into the drawing room.

"Well, I hope every one has enjoyed the evening as much as I have," Philip said flippantly. He was mixing whiskey and soda. He laughed suddenly. "Poor old Peter! If anybody was the odd man out, I am afraid it was he." His voice was a little loud, and his face flushed.

"For which he has you to thank," Eva said quickly.

She would have given her life to recall the words as soon as they were spoken; she clenched her hands in her lap and waited for the burst of passion which she was sure would come from Philip, but he only laughed again.

"The pot mustn't call the kettle black, you know," he said indifferently. "And, after all, it's for one night only," as I'm going home to the country tomorrow."

Eva tried to speak, but no word would pass her lips; she just sat and stared at her husband.

She had never seen him look so excited, she thought—so lovable. her heart added in aching parenthesis; he raised his tumbler and loked at her with mocking eyes.

"Well—here's luck!" he said carelessly.

"Why are you going home?" Calligan asked.

Face Pallid

His pallor was in strong contrast to his friend's flushed face; he looked like a man who was undergoing some severe strain.

Philip refilled his glass before he answered.

"I promised mother to go down for the week-end," he said carelessly. "I want to tell her about South Africa, too."

Eva closed her eyes for a moment.

"I thought you told me you hadn't decided anything," Eva said, when her husband announced his decision to go to South Africa. Philip just glanced at her.

"I hadn't—then. . . ." He turned to Calligan. "I suppose Eva has told you about Faulkner's offer?" he asked.

"She said something—yes. But of course, you're not serious! My dear Philip, it's—it's absurd!"

"Is it? I'm going, all the same."

"But why in the world?" Calligan protested desperately.

Philip laughed.

"Now, I should have thought you would approve of it," he said. "You were always a globe trotter. You used to tell me that I stayed at home too much."

"Yes, but now——"

"Now is the appointed time," Philip interrupted, flippantly.

"Have another drink? No? All right."

Calligan rose from his chair.

"Well, I'll be saying good night—he said shortly. "You'll be wanting to make an early start tomorrow, Mrs. Winterdick."

"Why don't you call her by her Christian name?" Philip asked boisterously. "She won't mind, and I'm sure I don't."

Eva had risen, too. She was as white as her dress.

"I'm not going to the country tomorrow, Mr. Calligan," she said clearly. "Philip is going alone. I would far rather stay here."

"There's a compliment for you!" Philip said, recklessly.

Philip Laughed

Calligan swung round.

"Philip," he began harshly, but Philip only laughed. "Silly old owl! I'm only joking," he said. He let Eva see Calligan to the door. As they left the room they heard him break into the rollicking chorus of a song.

Calligan looked at Eva, and suddenly she covered her face with her hands.

"Don't—no——" she said faintly. He caught her hand.

"Give him another chance—give him another chance," he said. He went away, shutting the door behind him. Eva stood for a long moment where he had left her. Another chance! Oh, but he did not want it! He had no use for her. She did not count in his life at all; he made all his plans independently of her wishes; she was no more to him than any other woman in the world——

But Calligan's voice rang urgently in her ears—"Give him another chance—give him another chance."

She roused herself with an effort and went back to the drawing room. "Philip——"

Philip turned round and faced her.

"Yes."

"Do you—would you rather that I came to the country with you tomorrow?"

"Come if you like," he said casually. "But it's not necessary."

She made a last effort.

"I thought perhaps your mother would think it strange if you——"

He laughed discordantly.

"Oh, don't worry about that. I can explain things. I can tell her that as Peter was here . . ."

"Very well." She waited a moment; more because she was afraid to trust her steps rather than from any desire to prolong the interview; then with an effort she turned to the door. "Good night."

Philip did not answer.

She walked on, her head held erect. She went into her room and shut the door. She stood for a moment looking before her with blank eyes.

"I've given him his chance," she said aloud.

Lunched Alone

Eva lunched alone. Peter had gone out early and left word that he did not know when he should be back. Eva sighed wearily. She supposed that last night would make more trouble between Peter and Kitty. She knew that Peter had been seething with rage and jealousy all the evening.

The rooms seemed very quiet without Philip. After lunch she went into the library and looked around with resolute eyes.

Anecdotes of the Famous

Those who remember the ex-Kaiser's congratulatory telegram to Kruger after the Jameson raid will be amused at the sequel.

Cecil Rhodes was held responsible for the raid, and when, three years later, he met the Kaiser, he said, according to his biographer, Basil Williams:

"You see, I was a naughty boy, and you tried to whip me. Now my people were quite ready to whip me for being a naughty boy, but directly you did it they said: 'No, if this is anybody's business, it is ours.' The result was that Your Majesty got yourself very much disliked by the English people, and I never got whipped at all."

Truth About India Worries British Government

The Budget of the British Government in India contains an appropriation of $200,000 to make a beginning of propaganda in this country to influence American opinion in favor of tolerance towards British rule in India. This sum for propaganda and the other sums which will follow it is to be wrung from the wretched people by enforced taxation. It is to be spent to slander the people of India, to bear false witnesses against their leaders and to make black seem white in a hundred years of British tyranny and robbery.

The object of this little editorial is not to denounce Great Britain's conduct in India or to appeal to Americans to sympathize with India in her struggle for freedom. It is merely to call attention to the power of truth, even of naked, unaided, suppressed truth to worry the guilty.

For fifty years, indeed ever since the Sepoy rebellion, British propaganda plus American ignorance of foreign languages which has compelled us to read the history of the world from British literature, has created a widespread notion in this country that Britain was governing India wisely and generously and was giving her what little she had. Few, if any Americans, realised that England had condemned India to slow death, and year after year for 170 years had been sucking her blood drop by drop until today she is bled white and is so impoverished that there are over 150,000,000 of people who get only one meal of rice a day throughout the year and 75,000,000 who get one meal of rice in two days.

Not one American in a thousand knows that famines began with British rule in India and have increased steadily as a direct result of British tyranny and exploitation, until two years ago, in 1918, 32,000,000 human beings of our own race and of a more ancient civilization than ours, died of the slow and dreadful torture of hunger, and while their cries of agony were rising to Heaven the British Government took away from them and exported 7,000,000 tons of the grains they had raised, and which would have saved the lives of every man, woman and child of those 32,000,000 whom British barbarism has thus sent prematurely to the great Seat of Judgment, there to bear witness to Britain's guilt in the worst crime of recorded history.

A baker's dozen of young Indian collegemen, figitive and penniless, but armed with the truth, in one year have so disturbed established American notions about India that the British have felt obliged to make elaborate and expensive preparations for another campaign of falsehood in America.

But Fate is with India.

Truth crushed to earth will rise again.

Daniels and Yap

Former Secretary of the Navy Daniels, whose splendid administration of the navy during the war and before it we have had many occasions to praise, speaking at Memphis the other day, said that we could not yield the Island of Yap with its cables to Japan even if it meant war. We agree most heartily with Mr. Daniels. But we decidedly disagree with him concerning the deductions which he attempts to draw from the delicate Yap situation.

If his speech is correctly reported, he attempts to make his audience believe that if we had entered the League of Nations or had otherwise won the respect of the world this Yap situation would not have arisen. But, said Mr. Daniels, "America today is without a friend." Hence he would deduce the reason for giving to Japan, without consulting America, this island where the cables of the Pacific cross and which lies athwart the strategic routes to the Philippines and to China.

We suppose that in all fairness we ought to forgive Mr. Daniels this little holdover of Wilsonian obsession. It will take him some time yet to slough it off, but in the meantime we should like to suggest for his consideration the thought that if President Wilson had paid a little less attention to the League of Nations and more consideration for protecting American interests, it would not now be necessary for Secretary Hughes to settle the Yap question; and that if France and England had been made by the Wilson administration to respect its capacity for understanding American interests and its courage to maintain them, we would not now have had a Yap issue serious enough to make a former Cabinet officer, peaceable and responsible citizen, declare that we must insist upon our rights there even if it means war.

We venture to say that France and England and Japan will treat the United States very differently in the pursuance of their imperialistic schemes while our State Department is in the hands of Charles E. Hughes, Esq.

"Red Riots" Nonsense

The newspapers are beginning to repeat the old absurdity that on May Day there is to be a Red Revolution in Boston and stories of police armed with machine guns, rifles, revolvers and even cannon, prepared on that day to fly about on horses, motorcycles and airplanes, are beginning to insult the intelligence of our people once more and to make the intelligent element of our citizens either disgusted or hilarious, according to their temperament.

Reference was made in one story to elaborate military preparations against the repetition of the "Red Riots" in Roxbury last May Day. There were no "Red Riots" in Roxbury last May Day, except such as were made by the lawless elements who attacked a peaceful body of Socialists marching to their headquarters, as they have done every May Day for ten or twenty years and as they had as much right to do as any organization in this country, whether it be Democrats or Republicans or Knights of Columbus or Knights Templars.

When shall we be rid of this nonsense which makes the American people seem so ridiculous?

NELLIE BLY WRITES ABOUT WIDOWERS

Man Left With Care of Several Small Children Certainly Deserves Sympathy. Hasty Marriage Not Best Solution of This Problem

By Nellie Bly

THE man who is most to be sympathized with is the father of a family who has lost his wife.

A man left with his home and several children is in a helpless and pitiable state. For it seems to be the fate of the widower to be unable to secure any hired help that will properly and efficiently care for his little ones.

Inefficiency in the majority of cases and outrageous demands in the others drive the widower almost to distraction.

Only when the wife is gone forevermore do many loveable realize what a treasure they possessed for the price of her clothes and food. Strangers will not go into a widowed household and care for a family of children with the same self-denial and faithfulness and love that a good wife gives.

Too Many Hasty Marriages

And it is only lack of help and his inability to secure satisfactory housekeepers that drive most widowers into a hasty and often ill-advised marriage.

I think the sad stepmothers of the world have been those whom men have chosen in haste and desperation to get housekeepers for themselves and mothers for their children. Then, of course, haste brings dissatisfaction and in almost every case misery and unhappiness.

But what is to be done for the helpless and unhappy widower?

One came to me the other evening. He looked ten years younger than what must have been his age, for his eldest daughter, he said, was nineteen years old. His wife had died several months ago, leaving him with a family of six, the younger ones twins two and one-half years old.

"What am I to do?" he begged unhappily. "My two eldest daughters have their young friends, and I cannot deny them that pleasure. My eldest daughter has a young man paying attention to her, and he is of a good family and a manly young fellow. So I cannot object to that.

"When Saturdays and Sundays come and I am home and free from the duties of business I experience my most miserable hours. My older children go out with their friends to seek their own amusements, and I stay at home. I can, of course, trundle the twins around, but that does not last long as an amusement.

"Don't think me foolish, but I made up my mind that you had to find me a wife to keep me from killing myself. I would rather be dead now than live another day as I am. Can you marry me to someone who will be a good mother to my children and a good wife to myself?"

Marriage is so uncertain that I for my part do not feel I would be happy in helping any one to that end. Yet—I want to help these unhappy widowers whose homes are on the brink of destruction. Here is a letter I received recently:

"Dear Miss Bly—For a long time I have been a reader of your articles. Many times in the last two years I have planned writing you.

"I have a little motherless baby boy. His mother died the day after he was born, leaving a sad, lonely man and homeless.

"This serious thought came to me when reading your articles—Why not adopt a baby and mother? A meeting, then friendship, love and marriage.

"The baby could be with its mother, the mother make the home my baby and I need.

"My baby is with his grandmother over in Pennsylavina, and I see him once a month. I have a fairly good position, earning $2,000 a year, but no home, just hotels.

"Possibly this thought seems absurd to you. But it is from the depths of an honest and lonely heart.

"Will enclose picture of my baby boy and his mother. Also a copy of a prayer she had stored away among her treasures. She wanted a baby so badly. God answered her prayers, and for her baby she gave her own life. She was such a good girl, so faithful, kind and true.

"Possibly this thought cannot be worked out, but I am willing to take your advice on the subject. Can give you the highest references.

"I have a pretty little farm up in New York State, a wonderful place for children to grow and become real men and women. Would gladly come to New York for a personal interview.

"Yours very truly,
"M. S. G."

It will be hard to find another woman so pretty as was his wife. Her photograph shows a lovely and beautiful young woman. And the baby boy is a darling, beautiful and plump. Below are other letters:

"Dear Madam—After reading your article on the 29th, I have been considering writing you for a long time.

"I am a widower, lost my wife eight years ago. I have four children, eldest sixteen; youngest, nine years of age. I am a great deal of time away from home as my work takes me almost anywhere.

"Miss Bly, I have had a trying time since I lost my wife. The first year I had my children in a home, but both they and myself were heartbroken. I had to take them out and start housekeeping again. I hired a housekeeper. I have had four of them; some good, some bad. And when I am away from home I am always worried as to what may happen to my children. The children are always asking and wondering why I don't give them a mother.

Has Nice Home

"I have a nice home and what I earn goes to my home. Nothing is too good for it. But the head of the house is missing.

"I am just wondering where all the good women are these days. I never had the nerve to even look or think to ask to get married again. But as time passes I see and feel that the children need some one who would give them a mother's care.

"Dear Miss Bly, I am not writing you nonsensically, but when I read A. B.'s letter which you published I thought maybe she was a woman that would appreciate a good home and a loving husband. If you know this lady and think it advisable, I would at least write her. I would give her a good home, also her child, and be a real father to the child. I know what my children have been suffering and also myself since we lost the dearest we had.

"I can give you a number of fine references.

"Sincerely yours,
"A LOVING FATHER."

Dear Miss Bly—Having lost my dear wife, I am left with four small children whom I have been caring for and also attending to my work. I thought I could find a good woman who would care for them. But I find this a very difficult matter and concluded to write to you for advice.

"I feel sure you, if any one, would know of some good woman appreciative of a home rather than a large salary. My children are of school age, two boys, aged six and seven, and two girls, four and eight.

"This problem is becoming more perplexing day by day.

"Thanking you for your kind consideration,

"Yours very respectfully,
"N. E."

No one needs help more than these fathers. But how are they to be helped? Who can solve their unhappy problems?

How Will It Be?

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

HOW will it be when one of us, alone,
Goes on that strange, last journey of the soul;
That certain search for an uncertain goal;
That voyage on which no comradeship is known?
Will our dear sea sing with the old sweet tone
Though one sits stricken where its billows roll?
Will space be dumb, or, from the Mystic pole,
Will spirit messages be backward blown?
When our united lives are wrenched apart
And day no more means fond companionship,
When fervent night and lovely, languorous dawn
Are only memories to one sad heart,
And but in dreams love kisses burn the lip,
Dear God, how can this same fair world move on?

POOR LO HAS BECOME A RICH MAN

By The Spectator

ONE of the thumpingest tales of history is being told in the book of time right now.

It is the remarkable, amazing and most unusual comedy of the Osage Indians.

While our ears are dinned with reports and rumors of famine and want, millions of children dying in Central Europe, whole cities of Russia depopulated by starvation, people in Chinese provinces dying like flies, drives to relieve destitution in Ireland and desolation in Armenia, the reader turns with relief and amusement to consider the fate of these Indians, who by the whirligig antic of fortune have been transformed from a group of houseless beggars into the richest tribe in the world.

Struck Oil

The Osages were some time ago shoved off into a reservation to get rid of them. They were poor and shiftless, according to the white man's ideas. So they were relegated to a section of country where there was as near nothing as any section of the earth produced. Into a region of alkali and rattlesnakes they were set down and told to go to farming.

Then one day came a fairy and touched their land, and revealed untold treasures.

There are at present 2,229 members of the tribe, and their nation covers territory a little larger than New Jersey.

Every one of them gets somewhere around $1,000 a month income from oil.

The result has been curious.

They own automobiles and drive as furiously as Jehu, the son of Nimshi. Or rather their chauffeurs drive for them. They have white chauffeurs, not dressed in uniform, they haven't got that far yet, and haven't had time to buy uniforms, but are clothed in corduroy trousers and flannel shirt.

Spending Money

Of course, at first we are tempted to say that these children of nature do not know how to spend money, but on second thought we ask ourselves, Who does?

And we are brought up to the conclusion that knowing how to spend money is the same thing as knowing how to live.

What every man needs is not more money, but more knowledge of the value of life.

There is probably just as much barbaric ignorance displayed in the Back Bay as there is in Oklahoma, and there is not much difference between spending $5,000 for a gay party on Broadway and wearing a $50,000 diamond sunburst to pin up an Indian blanket in Indian Territory.

'LOAFE' AND INVITE YOUR SOUL

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

YOUR use of your leisure tells your story. Tell me how you spend your spare time and I'll tell you what you are.

Some years ago, President Eliot pleaded with laboring men to put joy into their work. That would be easier if the average man's work, whether that be hand labor or mouth labor or mind labor, came nearer to being his own original choice and the means of expressing his own personality.

But at least we should get joy out of your leisure.

Let men say what they will about the need for toil, in order that we shall keep out of mischief, there is no doubt that we shall gradually so organize industry and so control our wants, that the needs and desires of the race will be met by an average workday of five hours or even less.

Be that as it may, even now the wise use of the large leisure of man, both daily and on holidays, is one of the vital questions for the individual and for society.

Cannot Dictate

Society cannot dictate the nature of the employment of his playtime to the individual. We, the individuals, have a right to demand that society shall not be unduly restrictive in governing our choice. Specifically this refers to the weekly day of rest. Some of us do not regard a long face as the unique and necessary symbol of religiousness and goodness. Most folk are better and feel better when they laugh and play.

If the hard-working masses of men concede Sunday morning to the church, organized religion in turn should be wise and sympathetic enough to encourage the use of the afternoons for play and the seeing of games, and in every way for revelling innocently in God's great out-of-doors. Why should the rich man be able to play golf and tennis on Sundays, and the poor man or the average person be unable to play ball or to see a ball game? Yes, even a professional game.

Education in the wise use of leisure is a slow process. If a man prefers to sleep away his spare time. It may mean either that he is overworked or that he knows so little of the value and joy of life that he is willing to spend much of his leisure in unconsciousness and the near-death of sleep.

It is certainly no argument against reduction of the hours of labor that most persons would waste their newly-found leisure.

We Shall Learn

Given time and custom, gradually we shall learn how to translate holidays and leisure into life—and more life.

As Walt Whitman puts it, we shall learn how to "loafe and invite our souls."

By the way, the late John Burroughs, lover of nature and of leisure—and surely beloved by both—was a beautiful loafer. He was one of the wisest of men in the use of his leisure. And he had lots of it.

Like most Americans, Burroughs started poor. He served his period of apprenticeship as wage earner, as a servant of Uncle Sam in Washington. Losing his political job, he returned to nature, and in time became America's most glorified and successful loafer.

Of course, this is not meant as disparagement. To disrespect John Burroughs is to risk losing the respect of others—almost to forfeit one's self-respect. Indeed, this is intended as a tribute to the Seer of "Slabsides," because he learned how to make his work his play.

Burroughs became richer than Rockefeller. On the basis that time is money, he had all the time there was. He printed his working moments and his leisure hours into coin of the realm of the spirit.

He could afford to be a spendthrift of time, and to give largess of his leisure to great varieties of men who came to him to learn how to loaf.

Not only his spirit's next of kin, John Muir, but such different types as Roosevelt, Edison and Ford, love to divide their souls with this expert loafer.

How do you spend your Sundays and holidays?

What is the autobiography of your leisure?

To the Editor

South Station Roof.

Editor Boston American:

It occurred to me this morning that it might be well for your paper to call the attention of Boston Terminal Company to the deplorable condition of the roof in the South Station, through which a veritable downpour of water has flowed all Winter. On some of the platforms this morning the water was two inches deep. I trust that you will find space to suggest a much needed improvement.

JAMES A. WHITE.
